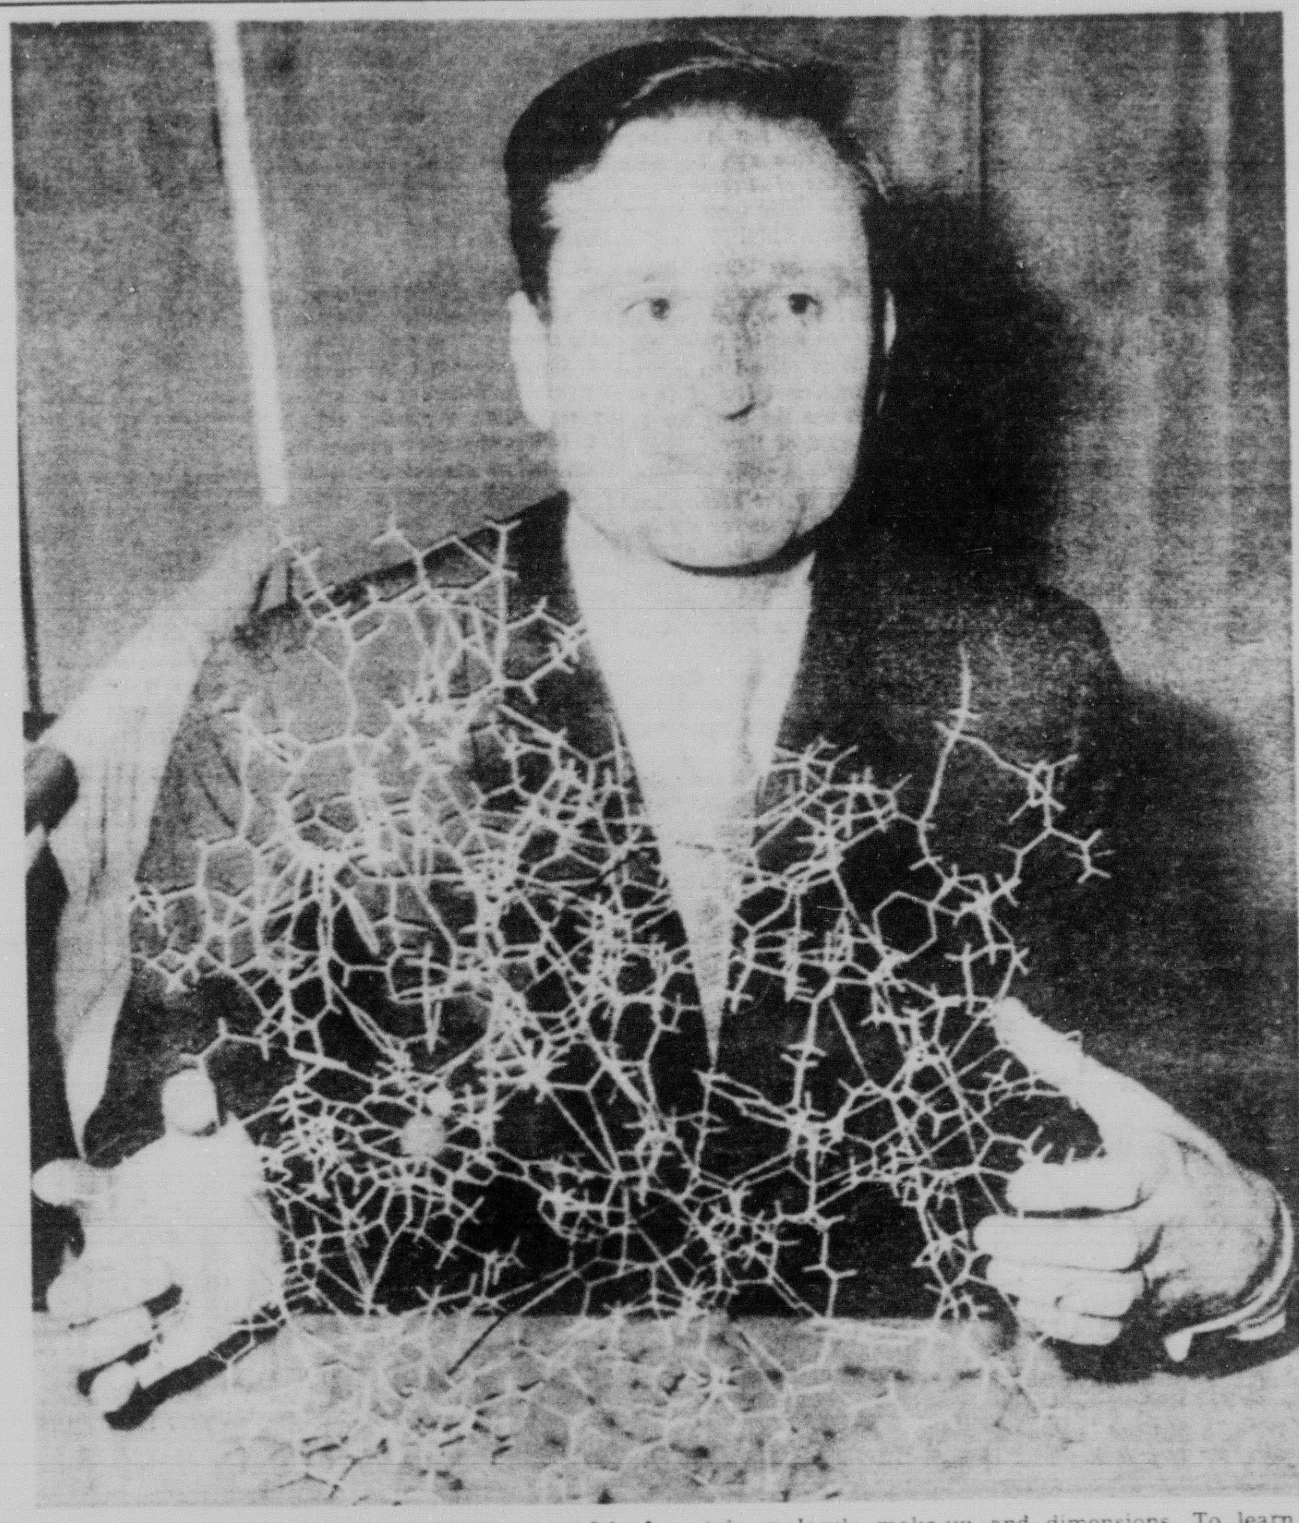
Soviet Threat Is Greatest In Europe, McNamara Warns



DR. WATSON AND MYSTERY OF LIFE—A model of the shape and make-up of protein molecules is displayed by Dr. H. C. Watson after annual meeting of Biophysical Society in New York, Monday. One of the great mysteries of life now is almost solved, the British scientist told the society, by the discovery of the protein molecule make-up and dimensions. To learn just why and how a protein molecule functions is a prime goal of modern science. They are the building blocks of the human body. WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara told senators today that "the Communist threat in Europe is the largest single threat we face in the world."

He outlined his department's over-all defense plans before the Senate Armed Service Committee, some members of which were anxious to ask him about a more specific problem, the menace of Soviet arms and troops in Cuba.

McNamara said the Communist peril in Europe is greatest "because Western Europe, aside from the United States represents the most important center of free world power."

Leadville Arsonist Confesses

LEADVILLE (UPI)—A 20-year-old Leadville man today confessed setting by accident a $250,000 blaze in this historic mining town Saturday night, investigator Herbert Watson said.

Watson identified the man as Richard John Keys, a native of Leadville. Keys told Watson and police officers he broke into the 600 Bar, in the three-story brick building where the fire occurred, looking for a drink, late Saturday night.

Watson said Keys told officers he lit his lighter to give illumina-

Illegal Fringe Benefits to Be Banned by Love

DENVER (AP) — Gov. John A. Love said here Colorado will permit no illegal fringe benefits — such as food from commissaries—to have been enjoyed by state officials at institutions.

The governor commented about a report by State Controller Gray Spurlin showing that some benefits were being allowed at institutions despite a state fiscal rule forbidding them.

Love mentioned no names.

It is a problem, he said, "which we will have to meet head on."

He said he has already discussed the situtation with Institutions Director David A. Hamil.

"If action creates employment problems," Love said, "we will meet them in ways within the law."

The governor implied it might require some pay raises.

Greek Prince Will Stop Here on Orientation Tour

Prince Peter of Greece will head a delegation of 12 officers from the Interallied Confederation of Reserve Officers which will stop here March 3 and 4 as part of a NATO reservist orientation tour.

The delegation will arrive at Peterson Field March 3 and is scheduled to tour NORAD facilities and the Air Force Academy the next day.

The tour is being made under sponsorship of the Department of Defense and the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

A social reception and dinner is being planned for March 4 by the Department of Colorado ROA.

Accompanying the delegation will be officials of the Department of Defense and Maj. Gen. John H. Foster, president of ROA; Adm. John E. Harlin, past president of the association, and Brig. Gen. Thomas H. King, escort officer, all from Washington, D.C.

Col. Donald H. Puffer, state ROA president, has appointed Col. Lawrence Collins, Denver, as project officer to arrange for the social reception and dinner. Lt. Col. Thomas H. Martinez, Colorado Springs, is assistant project officer.

All major installation military commanders, staff officers, unit commanders and officers and their wives will be invited to participate in the affair. Reserve officers thruout the state will also be invited.

Public Trustee Election Bill Is Defeated

DENVER (UPI)—The Colorado Senate today apparently killed a bill to provide for the election of public trustees in the state's larger counties, except Denver.

The bill was defeated on a standing vote during second reading, but the action will be reconsidered this afternoon under normal procedures.

Navajo Peyote Appeal Denied By High Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court Monday denied a hearing to eight Navajo Indians who contended that a tribal ordinance, upheld by the Interior Department, banning the use of the drug peyote during religious ceremonies violated their constitutional rights.

The court refused to question Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall's approval of the Navajo tribal ordinance banning the use of the herb by the Native American Church, to which all eight Indians belonged.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia had upheld the secretary in earlier rulings.

The Indians contended that peyote, a vision-inducing cactus bud, was an indispensable part of the prayer and ritual of their 33,000-member church. They said banning its use was an unconstitutional violation of their rights.

The Navajos contended further that Udall, in approving the Navajo Tribal Council's action in banning use of peyote, had taken federal action prohibited by the constitution.

Government attorneys said the Indians should have taken action against the tribal council rather than the secretary, who merely approved the ordinance as required by law. They said the Interior Department did not intend to enforce the ordinance and noted that Udall had taken no position as to the harmfulness of peyote.

The government also noted that Arizona, California, Colorado and Montana have statutes prohibiting the use or possession of peyote.

The Association of American Indian Affairs, entering the case as a "friend of the court," asked that the Supreme Court review the case to help clear up the extent to which Indians are subject

Vessel Hijacked By Reds Proceeds To Brazil Port

BELEM, Brazil (AP)—A small detachment of Brazilian marines was reported today to have boarded the hijacked Venezuelan freighter Anzoategui. The ship was proceeding toward this port at the mouth of the Amazon River.

The Venezuelan government shipping company, owners of the Anzoategui, said in Caracas it had received a message from the ship reporting that she would put into Macapa, at the north entrance to the Amazon, about 200 miles northwest of Belem. All aboard the vessel were reported well.

Four Brazilian marines set out from Belem this morning to board the ship. At the time, she was anchored near an island off the Brazilian north coast.

Later the Anzoategui got up steam and headed southward.

Lt. Francisco Mereiros Araujo and three sergeants were under orders to take control of the ship in the name of the Brazilian government.

Presumably, they had assurances from the nine armed hijackers—members of a Venezuelan terrorist organization — there would be no resistance.

The marines left here aboard a chartered commercial airliner for the coastal town of Amapa. There, they were to have boarded a boat for the short trip to the Anzoategui, which had anchored off the island of Maraca.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported, however, that the ship was under way this morning, staying close to shore. It said that the Anzoategui was 70 miles from the island and proceeding southward toward Belem.

JFK Gives Solons Briefing on Latin American Issues

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy has given congressional leaders a 40-minute briefing on Cuba and Latin America at a swiftly called White House meeting that had all the makings of high drama.

Almost a score of legislators, given only a couple of hours of advance warning of the secret session Monday night, slipped in and out of the executive mansion, avoiding reporters. Later, however, those who would talk described it all as a routine report.

One Republican leader, who declined to be quoted by name, brushed it off as a "rehash of the situation in Cuba and Latin America."

He said he viewed it as an attempt to quiet some of the attacks on the administration's Cuban policy.

He said he thought Kennedy has been "disturbed by some of the criticism Republicans have been aiming at his foreign policy and is trying to pacify us. They are smart boys there."

Kennedy was aided at the briefing by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Central Intelligence Agency chief John A. McCone and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

"Just a general intelligence roundup on Cuba" and some other areas, said Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

Sen. George A. Smathers, D-Fla., remarked he didn't hear anything particularly new about the Cuban situation and the Soviet military power there but "the general feeling was that things looked a little better."

It seemed like something big might be in the wind when the word leaked down from Capitol Hill that Kennedy had summoned 17 Congress members, mainly from the Armed Forces and Foreign Affairs committees.

Speculation centered on the possibility the President was advis-

Horse Racing Site Proposed Between Springs and Pueblo

A bid for a state license to stage an annual spring horse racing meeting at a site midway between Colorado Springs and Pueblo has reportedly been submitted to the Colorado Racing Commission.

The request is expected to come before the commission on Wednesday when hearings are scheduled on two earlier applications.

The project, to be known as Midway Enterprises, Inc., is sponsored by businessmen from Pueblo and Colorado Springs and is to be headed by Conyers Stewart of Pueblo.

It was reported the group has an option on 300 acres of land immediately west of Interstate Highway 25 (U.S. 85-87) about 20 miles north of Pueblo. The point has commonly been known as Midway.

Plans call for construction of a grandstand to seat 1,500 fans, with expansion planned to seat 3,000 persons. The racing strip will be either five-eighths or three-quarters of a mile and there will be stall space to accommodate at least 500 horses.

The request for both thorobred and quarterhorse racing on a parimutuel basis of wagering.

It was also reported that the group plans a recreation area in the future, near the racing site

There was some doubt whether the plan will be approved by the state commission since the proposed dates conflict with the schedule submitted by one of the groups which made their requests earlier. The Midway track is requesting dates between early-April to mid-June, with racing slated for Friday and Saturday of each week with a total of approximately 30 days of racing.

The St. Vrain Development Corp., which hopes to stage horse racing from April 17 to June 20 with its inaugural meeting in 1964, has submitted its request before Wednesday's meeting also. This proposed track would be located near Longmont. Al Krough, of Denver, heads this group which plans the track near the junction of U.S. Highway 287 and Colo. 66, 30 miles north of Denver and two miles north of Longmont.

The commission will also consider a proposed greyhound track near Allison, Colo., close to the New Mexico border in the Four Corners area. This track is planned for next year if approved.

Outbreaks of Influenza Spread to Middle West

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Outbreaks of influenza-like disease, hitting epidemic proportions in some Eastern localities, have spread to the Middle West. Respiratory illnesses have been reported to some degree throughout most of the nation.

New York City has an Asian flu epidemic, but it is not as serious as in 1957 when this particular strain swept across the United States for the first time, said Dr. George James, city health commissioner.

In upstate New York, four 40-bed wards of the Veterans Administration hospital at Buffalo were quarantined because of what a doctor termed an outbreak of an acute, flu-like respiratory infection. It has not been diagnosed as Asian flu. In the Buffalo area, five schools reported 10 per cent absenteeism because of illness.

More than 1,000 new cases a day were reported in West Virginia last week.

Flu-like outbreaks spread in Indiana, Michigan, Kansas and Missouri.

Kansas reported the disease on the increase in counties which include Kansas City, Topeka and Lawrence, home of the state university.

In the Cincinnati, Ohio, area, about 15 per cent of the area's school children were out Monday, compared with 23 per cent Friday. City health officials said the flu plague may end quickly—within 10 days.

The Communicable Disease Center of the U.S. Public Health Service said cases have been reported in parts of the South, Southwest, Pacific Coast and the Rocky Mountains.

The center's latest report—covering the week ending Feb. 9—includes 707 pneumonia-influenza deaths in the 108 cities which file reports. There were more than 10,000 cases reported this week.

Publishers Voice Doubts in News Strike Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner, faced with an impasse in the city's 74-day-old newspaper blackout, has hinted that eventually he may come up with a peace formula of his own.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has offered the services of the state government again to try to get the city's nine major dailies back on the streets.

Wagner was asked Monday if he was considering offering a mediation proposal in the strike

Col. James O. M. Roberts, a veteran British mountaineer and the only non-American on the team, led a 14-truck convoy to the end of the road at Banepa, 30 miles east of here. The trucks are loaded with scientific equipment for high-altitude observations.

The team leader, Norman H. Dyhrenfurth of Santa Monica, Calif., and 18 others expect to set out in jeeps Wednesday.

It had been feared that difficulties with Nepal's foreign exchange regulations might delay their start for the base camp. The team planned to use Indian rupees for porters' wages and other local expenses. But the Nepal government insisted on its buying Nepali rupees. Informants said the problem had been settled.

The climbers included two from Colorado, two from Wyoming and a doctor who attended the University of Colorado.

They are Allen C. Auten, 36, Denver; Richard F. Pownall, 35, Lakewood, Colo.; John E. Breitenbach, 27, and James Barry Corbett, 26, both Grand Teton mountain guides, Jackson, Wyo., and Lt. Cmdr. Thomas F. Hornbein, 31, an anesthetist at San Diego (Calif.) Naval Hospital and '52 graduate of Colorado U.

Auten is assistant editor of "Design News" while Pownall is on leave as a physical education instructor at Creighton Junior High School in Jefferson County.

Skiffington Says Votes Shy for Liberty Proposal

DENVER (AP) — The sponsor of a memorial asking Congress to abolish the federal income tax says he is three or four votes shy of the 18 required to drive it through the Colorado Senate.

Sen. L. T. Skiffington, R-Manitou Springs, disclosed the situation to a reporter only a few hours before the bill was due up for debate this morning.

Skiffington said he had agreed to send the memorial back to the Business Affairs Committee which he heads.

"I don't know whether I will try to bring it out again this session or not," he added.

The plan is called by sponsors the "Liberty Amendment." It would forbid Congress from enacting any federal tax on personal income, would forbid federal taxes on inheritance and gifts and would force the government out of any business in which it competes with private citizens.

The memorial asks Congress to call a constitutional convention to write the amendment, which then would have to be ratified by legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

The plan is different than the memorial passed by the Senate last week asking Congress to put a ceiling on federal income taxes and to forbid federal inheritance or gift taxes. That memorial is now in the Finance Committee of the House of Representatives. It met Monday afternoon, but took no action on the memorial.

Mobil Economy Run Slated For March 30

LOS ANGELES (UPI)— The 1963 Mobil economy run from here to Detroit beginning March 30 will run through Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, and Omaha, the U.S. Auto Club announced Monday.

The 2,500-mile, six-day test trip for 35 new passenger cars was described by run officials as the longest and toughest of the 27-year history of the economy run.

Labor Chiefs Fear Decline Of Power

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Labor union leaders said today at their winter meetings they are acutely aware that white collar workers are far outstripping manual workers as potential union members in the American job market.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz planned to meet during the day with members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council on current problems, including what Wirtz has said is a trend begun in 1956 for technical workers teamed with machines to outstrip craftsmen.

Organized labor in the AFL-CIO has been worried for some time over the prospect that unionized American workers will become increasingly a minority group with declining political and social influence.

More Students May Have To Start Walking to School

Long before the foot-hike fad hit the nation, elementary students in Harrison School District 2 were demonstrating their physical fitness by walking to and from school and according to N.V. Gorman, superintendent, there is a possibility that some junior and senior high school students may have to learn the age-old foot travel methods.

Gorman told school board members Monday that the district has reached its saturation point in transporting junior and senior high students to school and offered the novel walk-to-school program as a solution.

Four over-crowded buses, owned by the district, now haul about 300 students to school within an hour which necessitates several fast trips over the route for each bus.

City bus service is not available in the area of Harrison School District, Gorman said, and the school has provided transporation for students for several years.

The school enrollment has now reached a record 2,179 students while the number of buses has not increased proportionately.

School board members did not reach a decision Monday regarding the transportation problem tho a report of availability of district funds to purchase a new bus will be made at the next meeting.

Two first grade teachers, Mrs. Jessie Straughan, of Stratton Meadows and Mrs. Maxine Adams, Chamberlin, were visitors at the school board meeting Monday and told board members about class curriculum and related problems.

The request is expected to come before the commission on Wednesday when hearings are scheduled on two earlier applications.

The project, to be known as Midway Enterprises, Inc., is sponsored by businessmen from Pueblo and Colorado Springs and is to be headed by Conyers Stewart of Pueblo.

It was reported the group has an option on 300 acres of land immediately west of Interstate Highway 25 (U.S. 85-87) about 20 miles north of Pueblo. The point has commonly been known as Midway.

Plans call for construction of a grandstand to seat 1,500 fans, with expansion planned to seat 3,000 persons. The racing strip will be either five-eighths or three-quarters of a mile and there will be stall space to accommodate at least 500 horses.

The request for both thorobred and quarterhorse racing on a parimutuel basis of wagering.

It was also reported that the group plans a recreation area in the future, near the racing site

There was some doubt whether the plan will be approved by the state commission since the proposed dates conflict with the schedule submitted by one of the groups which made their requests earlier. The Midway track is requesting dates between early April to mid-June, with racing slated for Friday and Saturday of each week with a total of approximately 30 days of racing.

The St. Vrain Development Corp., which hopes to stage horse racing from April 17 to June 20 with its inaugural meeting in 1964, has submitted its request before Wednesday's meeting also. This proposed track would be located near Longmont. Al Krough, of Denver, heads this group which plans the track near the junction of U.S. Highway 287 and Colo. 66, 30 miles north of Denver and two miles north of Longmont.

The commission will also consider a proposed greyhound track near Allison, Colo., close to the New Mexico border in the Four Corners area. This track is planned for next year if approved.

Outbreaks of Influenza Spread to Middle West

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Outbreaks of influenza-like disease, hitting epidemic proportions in some Eastern localities, have spread to the Middle West. Respiratory illnesses have been reported to some degree throughout most of the nation.

New York City has an Asian flu epidemic, but it is not as serious as in 1957 when this particular strain swept across the United States for the first time, said Dr. George James, city health commissioner.

In upstate New York, four 40-bed wards of the Veterans Administration hospital at Buffalo were quarantined because of what a doctor termed an outbreak of an acute, flu-like respiratory infection. It has not been diagnosed as Asian flu. In the Buffalo area, five schools reported 10 per cent absenteeism because of illness.

More than 1,000 new cases a day were reported in West Virginia last week.

Flu-like outbreaks spread in Indiana, Michigan, Kansas and Missouri.

Kansas reported the disease on the increase in counties which include Kansas City, Topeka and Lawrence, home of the state university.

In the Cincinnati, Ohio, area, about 15 per cent of the area's school children were out Monday, compared with 23 per cent Friday. City health officials said the flu plague may end quickly—within 10 days.

The Communicable Disease Center of the U.S. Public Health Service said cases have been reported in parts of the South, Southwest, Pacific Coast and the Rocky Mountains.

The center's latest report—covering the week ending Feb. 9—includes 707 pneumonia-influenza deaths in the 108 cities which file reports. There were more than 10,000 cases reported this week.

Publishers Voice Doubts in News Strike Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner, faced with an impasse in the city's 74-day-old newspaper blackout, has hinted that eventually he may come up with a peace formula of his own.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has offered the services of the state government again to try to get the city's nine major dailies back on the streets.

Wagner was asked Monday if he was considering offering a mediation proposal in the strike

Col. James O. M. Roberts, a veteran British mountaineer and the only non-American on the team, led a 14-truck convoy to the end of the road at Banepa, 30 miles east of here. The trucks are loaded with scientific equipment for high-altitude observations.

The team leader, Norman H. Dyhrenfurth of Santa Monica, Calif., and 18 others expect to set out in jeeps Wednesday.

It had been feared that difficulties with Nepal's foreign exchange regulations might delay their start for the base camp. The team planned to use Indian rupees for porters' wages and other local expenses. But the Nepal government insisted on its buying Nepali rupees. Informants said the problem had been settled.

The climbers included two from Colorado, two from Wyoming and a doctor who attended the University of Colorado.

They are Allen C. Auten, 36, Denver; Richard F. Pownall, 35, Lakewood, Colo.; John E. Breitenbach, 27, and James Barry Corbett, 26, both Grand Teton mountain guides, Jackson, Wyo., and Lt. Cmdr. Thomas F. Hornbein, 31, an anesthetist at San Diego (Calif) Naval Hospital and '52 graduate of Colorado U.

Auten is assistant editor of "Design News" while Pownall is on leave as a physical education instructor at Creighton Junior High School in Jefferson County

Leadville Arsonist Confesses

LEADVILLE (UPI)—A 20-year-old Leadville man today confessed setting by accident a $250,000 blaze in this historic mining town Saturday night, investigator Herbert Watson said.

Watson identified the man as Richard John Keys, a native of Leadville. Keys told Watson and police officers he broke into the 600 Bar, in the three-story brick building where the fire occurred, looking for a drink, late Saturday night.

Illegal Fringe Benefits to Be Banned by Love

DENVER (AP) — Gov. John A. Love said here Colorado will permit no illegal fringe benefits — such as food from commissaries—to have been enjoyed by state officials at institutions.

The governor commented about a report by State Controller Gray Spurlin showing that some benefits were being allowed at institutions despite a state fiscal rule forbidding them.

Love mentioned no names.

It is a problem, he said, "which we will have to meet head on."

He said he has already discussed the situtation with Institutions Director David A. Hamil.

"If action creates employment problems," Love said, "we will meet them in ways within the law."

Skiffington Says Votes Shy for Liberty Proposal

DENVER (AP) — The sponsor of a memorial asking Congress to abolish the federal income tax says he is three or four votes shy of the 18 required to drive it through the Colorado Senate.

Sen. L. T. Skiffington, R-Manitou Springs, disclosed the situation to a reporter only a few hours before the bill was due up for debate this morning.

Skiffington said he had agreed to send the memorial back to the Business Affairs Committee which he heads.

"I don't know whether I will try to bring it out again this session or not," he added.

The plan is called by sponsors the "Liberty Amendment." It would forbid Congress from enacting any federal tax on personal income, would forbid federal taxes on inheritance and gifts and would force the government out of any business in which it competes with private citizens.

The memorial asks Congress to call a constitutional convention to write the amendment, which then would have to be ratified by legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

The plan is different than the memorial passed by the Senate last week asking Congress to put a ceiling on federal income taxes and to forbid federal inheritance or gift taxes. That memorial is now in the Finance Committee of the House of Representatives. It met Monday afternoon, but took no action on the memorial.

BUG-BITE VICTIM WINS — James T. Gallick, 61, above, heard the news Monday that the U.S. Supreme court has affirmed his $625,000 damage award from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Labor Chiefs Fear Decline Of Power

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Labor union leaders said today at their winter meetings they are acutely aware that white collar workers are far outstripping manual workers as potential union members in the American job market.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz planned to meet during the day with members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council on current problems, including what Wirtz has said is a trend begun in 1956 for technical workers teamed with machines to outstrip craftsmen.

Organized labor in the AFL-CIO has been worried for some time over the prospect that unionized American workers will become increasingly a minority group with declining political and social influence.

Public Trustee Election Bill Is Defeated

DENVER (UPI)—The Colorado Senate today apparently killed a bill to provide for the election of public trustees in the state's larger counties, except Denver.

The bill was defeated on a standing vote during second reading, but the action will be reconsidered this afternoon under normal procedures.

Navajo Peyote Appeal Denied By High Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court Monday denied a hearing to eight Navajo Indians who contended that a tribal ordinance, upheld by the Interior Department, banning the use of the drug peyote during religious ceremonies violated their constitutional rights.

The court refused to question Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall's approval of the Navajo tribal ordinance banning the use of the herb by the Native American Church, to which all eight Indians belonged.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia had upheld the secretary in earlier rulings.

The Indians contended that peyote, a vision-inducing cactus bud, was an indispensable part of the prayer and ritual of their 33,000-member church. They said banning its use was an unconstitutional violation of their rights.

The Navajos contended further that Udall, in approving the Navajo Tribal Council's action in banning use of peyote, had taken federal action prohibited by the constitution.

Government attorneys said the Indians should have taken action against the tribal council rather than the secretary, who merely approved the ordinance as required by law. They said the Interior Department did not intend to enforce the ordinance and noted that Udall had taken no position as to the harmfulness of peyote.

The government also noted that Arizona, California, Colorado and Montana have statutes prohibiting the use or possession of peyote.

The Association of American Indian Affairs, entering the case as a "friend of the court," asked that the Supreme Court review the case to help clear up the extent to which Indians are subject

Vessel Hijacked By Reds Proceeds To Brazil Port

BELEM, Brazil (AP)—A small detachment of Brazilian marines was reported today to have boarded the hijacked Venezuelan freighter Anzoategui. The ship was proceeding toward this port at the mouth of the Amazon River.

The Venezuelan government shipping company, owners of the Anzoategui, said in Caracas it had received a message from the ship reporting that she would put into Macapa, at the north entrance to the Amazon, about 200 miles northwest of Belem. All aboard the vessel were reported well.

Four Brazilian marines set out from Belem this morning to board the ship. At the time, she was anchored near an island off the Brazilian north coast.

Later the Anzoategui got up steam and headed southward.

Lt. Francisco Mereiros Araujo and three sergeants were under orders to take control of the ship in the name of the Brazilian government.

Presumably, they had assurances from the nine armed hijackers—members of a Venezuelan terrorist organization — there would be no resistance.

The marines left here aboard a chartered commercial airliner for the coastal town of Amapa. There, they were to have boarded a boat for the short trip to the Anzoategui, which had anchored off the island of Maraca.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported, however, that the ship was under way this morning, staying close to shore. It said that the Anzoategui was 70 miles from the island and proceeding southward toward Belem.

More Students May Have To Start Walking to School

Long before the foot-hike fad hit the nation, elementary students in Harrison School District 2 were demonstrating their physical fitness by walking to and from school and according to N.V. Gorman, superintendent, there is a possibility that some junior and senior high school students may have to learn the age-old foot travel methods.

Gorman told school board members Monday that the district has reached its saturation point in transporting junior and senior high students to school and offered the novel walk-to-school program as a solution.

Four over-crowded buses, owned by the district, now haul about 500 students to school within an hour which necessitates several fast trips over the route for each bus.

City bus service is not available in the area of Harrison School District, Gorman said, and the school has provided transporation for students for several years.

The school enrollment has now reached a record 2,179 students while the number of buses has not increased proportionately.

School board members did not reach a decision Monday regarding the transportation problem tho a report of availability of district funds to purchase a new bus will be made at the next meeting.

Two first grade teachers, Mrs. Jessie Straughan, of Stratton Meadows and Mrs. Maxine Adams, Chamberlin, were visitors at the school board meeting Monday and told board members about class curriculum and related problems.

Goldwater Denounces Grazing Fee Boost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., has branded a 50 per cent increase in grazing fees in 10 Western states "arbitrary" and said it was not based on sound economic judgement.

The increase was announced by Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall.

Goldwater said the new rates were put into effect "simply because the department feels the current fee is too low."

"The secretary has discarded a sound formula which was based on market value of beef which had worked effectively for the past five years," Goldwater said.

He said the fee increase did not take into account the increased costs of cattlemen. He said any increase would encourage greater imports of meat from abroad.

Rheumatic Heart Disease Rate Is High in Colorado

Although Colorado is blessed with one of the lowest death rates from heart disease in the nation, rheumatic heart disease rates in the state are high.

The most recent figures showed that the Colorado rate for rheumatic heart disease was 13.7 for every 100,000 as compared to a national death rate of 10.2

Deaths from congential heart disease (birth defects) also are higher in Colorado than for the nation.

This article on rheumatic fever—childhood's greatest enemy, is the fifth in a series on heart diseases published by the Gazette Telegraph to help educate the public about the diseases.

Sunday, Feb. 24, will be Heart Sunday in El Paso County and a door-to-door campaign is planned to collect money for the Colorado Heart Association.

The goal for the drive is $25,000. The advance gifts campaign has been under way for more than a month and the aim for that drive is $50,000.

Although heart disease take a great toll of lives every year, there are bright spots.

The death rate of children from ages of one through 14 from heart disease has been reduced in Colorado from the rate of 16.4 for every 100,000 in 1941 to the present rate of 1.7.

A similar reduction occurred in the 15 through 24 year age group, where the rate has been reduced from 24.6 to 5.2.

The high rates were of special interest to Colorado Springs.

After World War II, Colorado Springs entered into keen competition with other communities in the nation for federal installations.

What now is Ft. Carson then was Camp Carson, and there was a possibility that it might be closed.

The nation was becoming aware that it needed a good air defense, and this meant that there had to be an American Air Defense Command, which naturally had to have a headquarters some place.

Also, the U.S. Force was created from the U.S. Army Air Corps, and there was to be an Air Force Academy.

Such things mean huge payrolls and large initial expenditures as well as running expenses.

Other communities competing with Colorado Springs for these installations, pointed their fingers at the high rates of heart disease and claimed it would be hazardous to send troops and federal employees into the region.

The Colorado Heart Association was incorporated in August, 1947.

The association was aware of the problem faced by Colorado Springs, and to a certain extent the rest of the state, and put off spending money for a paid executive and staff so that the funds could be used to determine the facts.

A survey which involved examination of about half the sixth grade students in the state showed that indeed there was more rheumatic fever in Colorado than the national average, but that the cases of other heart disease was insignificant.

These facts were one of the bits of information that Colorado Springs and Colorado leaders used to successfully ask that Camp Carson be made into Fort Carson. They used the facts also to help them get the Air Force Academy and the North American Air Defense Command located here.

The cause of rheumatic fever is not known, but is known that it can be prevented.

Strep infection is common, and while only about three per cent of the population seems to be susceptible to rheumatic fever, prompt diagnosis and early treatment of all strep infections is urged to help prevent even the first occurrence of rheumatic fever.

Since rheumatic fever may attack any part of the body, the chance is small that the first attack will affect the heart.

Even if it does select the heart, one attack will not usually cause serious damage to the heart valves. Therefore, most emphasis on rheumatic fever control has been placed on diagnosis of the first, or early attacks.

It should be noted that an attack on rheumatic fever does not confer immunity to more attacks. In fact, a child who has had rheumatic fever becomes an easy mark for the disease for the rest of his life.

Therefore, it becomes very important to prevent strep infections in a person who has had rheumatic fever. This can be done through the use of several drugs. The most commonly used drug is penicillin, taken daily.

In 1953, a survey taken by the Colorado Heart Association revealed that only 16 per cent of the known rheumatic fever patients had been placed on a preventative drug, and few of these continued to use the drug for an adequate period of time.

An intensive education program was conducted by the association, but in 1955 another survey showed that 27 per cent of the patients were placed on a protective drug, and again only a few remained on the drug for a long enough period of time.

A study followed and showed that the cost of the drug probably was the greatest single barrier to long term prevention.

With the cooperation of the Colorado Pharmacal Association, and approval of the Colorado Health Department and Medical Society, the Heart Association started a program to get the prices lowered.

The program reduced the prices greatly, so that the patient paid only about $5 for what previously had cost about $25, and the price has since been reduced still more so that the comparative cost now is about $3.

In addition to saving hundreds of children from being cripples, the program has resulted in the savings of many thousands of dollars in drug bills.

The Colorado Heart Association also is supporting diagnostic clinics, education, and research in the cause, prevention and treatment, including surgery, of rheumatic fever.

The association cooperated with the Colorado State Health Department in development of a more rapid procedure for identifying strep infections, and is supporting a pilot project for prevention of first attack in the northeast and southwest sections of the state.

1. Seeing their physician immediately when any member of the family shows signs of strep infection. A booklet listing these signs may be obtained free from the Heart Association.
2. If a member of the family does contract rheumatic fever, be faithfull in using the preventative drug the physician prescribes.
3. Don't overlimit the patient's activities and thereby unnecessarily make him a cardiac cripple.
4. If the physician advises surgery, follow his advise without fear. Surgery techniques for cardiac conditions resulting from birth defects and rheumatic fever have advanced greatly during the past decade, and can usually be performed with minimum risk.
5. Support the Heart Association's program of research, community service and education. One way to do this is to contribute to the Heart Fund drive.

Rheumatic Heart Disease Rate Is High in Colorado

Although Colorado is blessed with one of the lowest death rates from heart disease in the nation, rheumatic heart disease rates in the state are high.

The most recent figures showed that the Colorado rate for rheumatic heart disease was 13.7 for every 100,000 as compared to a national death rate of 10.2

Deaths from congential heart disease (birth defects) also are higher in Colorado than for the nation.

This article on rheumatic fever —childhood's greatest enemy, is the fifth in a series on heart diseases published by the Gazette Telegraph to help educate the public about the diseases.

Sunday, Feb. 24, will be Heart Sunday in El Paso County and a door-to-door campaign is planned to collect money for the Colorado Heart Association.

The goal for the drive is $25,000. The advance gifts campaign has been under way for more than a month and the aim for that drive is $50,000.

Although heart disease take a great toll of lives every year, there are bright spots.

The death rate of children from ages of one through 14 from heart disease has been reduced in Colorado from the rate of 16.4 for every 100,000 in 1941 to the present rate of 1.7.

A similar reduction occurred in the 15 through 24 year age group, where the rate has been reduced from 24.6 to 5.2.

The high rates were of special interest to Colorado Springs.

After World War II, Colorado Springs entered into keen competition with other communities in the nation for federal installations.

What now is Ft. Carson then was Camp Carson, and there was a possibility that it might be closed.

The nation was becoming aware that it needed a good air defense, and this meant that there had to be an American Air Defense Command, which naturally had to have a headquarters some place.

Also, the U.S. Force was created from the U.S. Army Air Corps, and there was to be an Air Force Academy.

Such things mean huge payrolls and large initial expenditures as well as running expenses.

Other communities competing with Colorado Springs for these installations, pointed their fingers at the high rates of heart disease and claimed it would be hazardous to send troops and federal employees into the region.

The Colorado Heart Association was incorporated in August, 1947.

The association was aware of the problem faced by Colorado Springs, and to a certain extent the rest of the state, and put off spending money for a paid executive and staff so that the funds could be used to determine the facts.

A survey which involved examination of about half the sixth grade students in the state showed that indeed there was more rheumatic fever in Colorado than the national average, but that the cases of other heart disease was insignificant.

These facts were one of the bits of information that Colorado Springs and Colorado leaders used to successfully ask that Camp Carson be made into Fort Carson. They used the facts also to help them get the Air Force Academy and the North American Air Defense Command located here.

The cause of rheumatic fever is not known, but is known that it can be prevented.

Strep infection is common, and while only about three per cent of the population seems to be susceptible to rheumatic fever, prompt diagnosis and early treatment of all strep infections is urged to help prevent even the first occurrence of rheumatic fever.

Since rheumatic fever may attack any part of the body, the chance is small that the first attack will affect the heart.

Even if it does select the heart, one attack will not usually cause serious damage to the heart valves. Therefore, most emphasis on rheumatic fever control has been placed on diagnosis of the first, or early attacks.

It should be noted that an attack on rheumatic fever does not confer immunity to more attacks. In fact, a child who has had rheumatic fever becomes an easy mark for the disease for the rest of his life.

Therefore, it becomes very important to prevent strep infections in a person who has had rheumatic fever. This can be done through the use of several drugs. The most commonly used drug is penicillin, taken daily.

In 1953, a survey taken by the Colorado Heart Association revealed that only 16 per cent of the known rheumatic fever patients had been placed on a preventative drug, and few of these continued to use the drug for an adequate period of time.

An intensive education program was conducted by the association, but in 1955 another survey showed that 27 per cent of the patients were placed on a protective drug, and again only a few remained on the drug for a long enough period of time.

A study followed and showed that the cost of the drug probably was the greatest single barrier to long term prevention.

With the cooperation of the Colorado Pharmacal Association, and approval of the Colorado Health Department and Medical Society, the Heart Association started a program to get the prices lowered.

The program reduced the prices greatly, so that the patient paid only about $5 for what previously had cost about $25, and the price has since been reduced still more so that the comparative cost now is about $3.

In addition to saving hundreds of children from being cripples, the program has resulted in the savings of many thousands of dollars in drug bills.

The Colorado Heart Association also is supporting diagnostic clinics, education, and research in the cause, prevention and treatment, including surgery, of rheumatic fever.

The association cooperated with the Colorado State Health Department in development of a more rapid procedure for identifying strep infections, and is supporting a pilot project for prevention of first attack in the northeast and southwest sections of the state.

The Heart Association urges all parents to cooperate in preventing rheumatic fever in their family by:

1. Seeing their physician immediately when any member of the family shows signs of strep infection. A booklet listing these signs may be obtained free from the Heart Association.

2. If a member of the family does contract rheumatic fever, be faithfull in using the preventative drug the physician prescribes.

3. Don't overlimit the patient's activities and thereby unnecessarily make him a cardiac cripple.

4. If the physician advises surgery, follow his advise without fear. Surgery techniques for cardiac conditions resulting from birth defects and rheumatic fever have advanced greatly during the past decade, and can usually be performed with minimum risk.

5. Support the Heart Association's program of research, community service and education. One way to do this is to contribute to the Heart Fund drive.

Hi-Fi Buffs Are Described by Humorist West

By DICK WEST
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the most depressing things that has happened to me recently was meeting an attractive young government girl named Sharon Henderson.

Ordinarily, I do not find attractive young government girls depressing. Under certain circumstances I might even find them stimulating. But Miss Henderson is different.

Miss Henderson is building her own hi-fi system. Better she should spend her time making opium pipes or in some other comparatively harmless pursuit.

I was introduced to Miss Henderson by a representative of Harman-Kardon, Inc., one of those electronics firms that market hi-fi kits for assembly at home.

Harman-Kardon selected Miss Henderson to demonstrate its point that women can put together a hi-fi kit as well as men. Miss Henderson told me she is getting along beautifully with her kit.

"There's nothing to it," she said. "Just follow the book and you can't miss."

I suppose the nearest I ever came to a nervous breakdown was the time I purchased a kit that purported to contain the components of a stereo amplifier.

There were about 5,000 loose parts that theoretically fitted inside a metal cabinet scarcely larger than a cigar box. I finally abandoned the project after discovering that I had soldered a rheostat to my wristwatch.

This experience automatically made me resent Miss Henderson's competence, but that was not what caused my depression. The broader implications of her hobby were what I found disturbing.

I am referring to the sinister possibility that hi-fi addiction, which already has transistorized a large segment of the male population, will now become prevalent in the previously immune female of the species.

If so, civilization as we have known it is dead.

Already, it is nearly impossible to attend a party that isn't dominated by a bunch of sound system buffs woofing about their tweeters.

This customarily leads to a demonstration of the host's machine, particularly the prowess of its volume. The true test seems to be whether it can shatter a flower pot in the adjoining room.

For a lo-fi fellow like me, the only refuge is to join in conversation with the ladies. And if Harman-Kardon and Miss Henderson establish a trend, even that escape hatch will be closed.

Iron Curtain Will Not Stop Radio

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A radio transmitter capable of piercing the curtain of heat that has blacked out astronauts' voices during atmospheric re-entry was announced today by General Dynamics-Astronautics.

The firm said the transmitter is the first to send radio signals through the blackout sheath and has done so on more than a dozen missile flights from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

It has never had a failure, the company said.

The 3,000-degree heat built up by air friction when spacecraft plunge back to earth creates a layer of electrical resistance which blocks other transmitters.

WORK WEEK DROPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average factory work week fell in January for the second consecutive month. The Labor Department, in reporting Thursday that the work week declined .4 of an hour in January to 40.1 hours per week, said it would be concerned if the drop continued.

The department said that unemployment rose in January by 850,000 bringing total unemployment to 4.7 million, the same as in January, 1962.

Spike Heels Hazard For Auto Drivers

BOSTON (UPI) — Women's spiked heel shoes may be fashionable on the street but they are a hazard in the driver's seat of a car.

The Automobile Legal Association warned Thursday that "these long, thin heels manage to become wedged between the floor board and the hinge of the gas pedal. Depending upon the design of the floor controls, the only way to free the heel may be to depress the accelerator further toward the floor. The danger here is obvious."

The ALA suggested that women carry an extra pair of low heeled shoes in their cars to avoid this hazard.

DRUG CAUSES DEATHS

LONDON (UPI)—Health Minister Enoch powell said Monday night that 82 of 349 babies born in England and Wales with deformities attributable to the drug thalidomide have died.

Gas, Electric Power Record In January

Customers of the Colorado Springs Department of Public Utilities will see a hike in their electric and gas bills this month, reflecting the severe January cold temperatures.

The electric division generated a record 45,176,400 Kilowatt hours in January with a new peak hour demand established at 97,000 Kilowatts on Jan. 11. The new addition to the Martin Drake Power Plant carried some 50,000 Kilowatts of the unprecedented power demand.

Temperatures, which averaged 31.9 degrees above zero or 6.7 degrees above normal during January, demanded a tremendous gas volume. Customers of the Utilities Department used 2,375,264,000 cubic feet of gas.

Utilites Department statisticians reported that degree days, or the variation between normal 70-degree house temperature and additional heat needed to maintain the 70 degrees; totalled 1,331 in January.

So utilities customers were working their furnaces and other heating units full blast to offset the frigid readings which included two days when the temperature averaged 13 degrees below zero.

Normal pressure was maintained thruout the local system, despite the tremendous volume of gas used. Major industrial and commercial users switched to standby fuel, oil and or coal, to conserve the available gas supply for domestic users.

Despite the curtailments, more than 100 million cubic feet of gas was used on Jan. 11, exceeding the previous high by some 20 million cubic feet for a 24-hour period.

Carson Joins Annual Army Economy Drive

Ft. Carson has joined Army installations across the country in a campaign to stetch existing funds through June 30, the close of the fiscal year.

The comptroller's office said that current appropriations generally have been less than most posts felt they needed, and that the pinch is being felt "all the way down the line."

Economy moves here have slowed civilian hiring, prompted petroleum, oil and lubrication conservation and sparked a general cutback on unnecessary expenditures.

Meanwhile individual soldiers and civilians are asked to watch their own activities for possible waste of funds or unneeded wear and tear on equipment.

Individuals have been told to practice conservation of utility costs by being sure that lights and electrical equipment are turned off when not in use and by conserving stocks of paper and other expendables whenever possible and in every way.

They are advised that careful maintenance of field and office equipment to keep that machine operating better and longer cuts repair costs.

Temporary duty trips away from Carson are being suspended except in the highest priority situations, heat in Carson buildings is being held at 65 degrees in working hours and 60 degrees at night. Quarters occupants are asked to cooperate here.

Commercial telegrams and distance telephone calls should be bypassed in favor of air mail as another cost-cutter.

Resuscitator Calls Keep Firemen Busy

The fire department was busy with resuscitator calls Monday afternoon and night. At 1:12 p.m. a crew headed by Assistant Chief Herman Richter went to 25 N. Corona St., where McKindley Evans Sr., 65, had suffered a heart attack. An inhalator was used for 40 minutes by the firemen, after which Evans, restored to breathing, was taken to St. Francis Hospital in an E and E Ambulance.

At 9:47 p.m. the aerial resuscitator crew and Assistant Chief Richter went to 515 E. Costilla St., where Sheila Clayton, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Clayton, had stopped breathing. An inhalator was used for 10 minutes, when the child was restored to breathing.

At 1026 p.m. a resuscitator crew and Assistant Chief Richter went to 1022 S. Cascade Ave., where David Tufoya, 34, had suffered an apparent heart attack. The firemen used an inhalator for 15 minutes, after which the patient was taken to Penrose Hospital in an E and E Ambulance.

the Soviet Union would drastically alter the balance of power in the world," he added.

A censored version of McNamara's prepared testimony, covering some 163 pages, was made available to newsmen outside the the closed session. It appeared identical to one supplied when he appeared before the House Armed Services Committee on Jan. 30.

McNamara was called before the Senate Armed Services Committee for testimony behind closed doors on the progress of the administration's program to build a flexible force ofstrategic weapons capable of absorbing a nuclear attack and then hitting back at the Soviet Union.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., said McNamara will be "open to questions" about Soviet military strength in Cuba and seems likely to get plenty of them.

Stennis said the preparedness subcommittee he heads will begin a concentrated investigation of the Cuban situation later in the week, after McNamara has completed his report on the military posture.

Stennis' previous statement that another blockade of Cuba may be necessary if Soviet troops there cannot be forced out by economic means was topped by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., in another furious round of congressional debate Monday.

Goldwater, an Air Force Reserve major general and a member of the Armed Services Committee, called for a blockade of all shipments of any kind to Cuba. He said the Kennedy administration ought to get up "enough gumption" to end the Communist threat to the hemisphere "once and for all."

Goldwater sailed into a statement by Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, accusing Republicans of endangering Western unity by "divisive partisanship and irresponsible attacks on our nation's foreign policy." Fulbright named Goldwater, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Goldwater said Fulbright's attack had "all the earmarks of an action hastily ordered by the White House in line with the current campaign to shut up all critics of the New Frontier's short-sighted and disruptive foreign policy and in particular, to silence all Republican opposition."

Keys told officers he ran out of the building then remembered that people were inside, returned, and helped fight the fire until 4 a.m.

Watson, a special investigator for the National Board of Fire Underwriters, arrived in Leadville Sunday afternoon to investigate the blaze, which destroyed five businesses and 12 upper floor apartments.

There were no deaths or injuries. But two residents of the apartments were forced to jump from a second story window to escape.

Today's Weather

(Reports furnished by U. S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field as of 5:30 a.m. today!)

The storm that was located over the northwestern Gulf of Mexico Monday was around the Alabama-Georgia area near sunrise, making its presense felt as far north as the Virginias and Kentucky.

Rain and showers continued over Alabama and the south Atlantic states this morning with some sectors getting well soaked. Residents in northern Florida and extreme southern Georgia had been alerted to the possibility of a few severe thundershowers and a possible isolated tornado during the morning hours.

Gusty winds caused some damage in sections of northern Florida not far from Tallahassee.

Meanwhile, a combination of rain and wet snow fell over Tennessee, Kentucky and the mountains of North Carolina and the Virginias, accumulating several inches in some localities.

Elsewhere across the country, areas of snow were scattered across the northern border states from North Dakota to northern New England.

Meantime, patches of fog, light rain and freezing drizzle added to the dismal weather scene over the Iowa-northern Missouri and eastern Nebraska region.

In the far west, a new frontal system heading toward the northwest Pacific coast was spreading rain thru Washington with the southwest remaining fair and dry.

Temperature-wise, it was again a rather mild morning for the winter season with most thermometers logging the 20s and 30s. Coldest air was located over the north central portion of the country into northern New England where the teens were common, altho the mercury plunged to subzero levels along the northern borders of Minnesota and Michigan.

Milder 40s and 50s were logged along the Pacific coast and southern border sectors with Florida remaining in the 60 and 70 degree range.

Post Damage Estimated at $142,960

The 80-mile-per-hour winds which lashed Ft. Carson Feb. 1 caused damage estimated at $142,960, according to a survey by the Post Engineer and 7th Engineer Battalion.

Barracks' roofs and the Carson fire alarm system were hit hardest by the violent chinook.

Extensive damage to the fire alarm system was estimated at $75,000. Most of this was suffered by call boxes attached to poles. The alarm system, which uses the same poles as telephone and electrical facilities, also suffered losses from frayed and fallen lines.

The firm alarm system is still in operation, however.

Wind damage to barracks' roofs in the troop area was set at $18,800 by the survey. Support Command's former area had $12,050 in roof damage.

Post Engineer and Signal Corps personnel are making repairs along with troops who are making emergency repairs in unit areas.

Fifth U.S. Army Headquarters has been asked for funds to cover damage costs. If funds are approved, some repairs may be done by private contractors.

Army Safety 'Top Priority' Directors Told

Safety directors of the Army Air Defense Command's six regions were assured Monday that safety is an area of "top priority" in considerations from the office of the President right down to the man behind the missile.

Thomas H. Wilkenson, Army director of safety, read the text of a memorandum from the White House, in which President Kennedy set forth a safety policy for the federal service as a matter of "national concern."

The President's memo calls upon heads of executive departments and agencies and their staffs to "exert leadership" in accident-prevention and safe practices programs.

The presidential memorandum and Wilkenson's remarks were reinforced by statements made in the opening address of the three-day safety conference by Maj. Gen. Dwight B. Johnson, deputy commanding general of ARADCOM.

Gen. Johnson told the delegates that they have the "command interest" and support of ARADCOM headquarters in their work and observed that the presence of Wilkenson was evidence that this support extends all the way from Department of the Army to the missile batteries of ARADCOM.

This command interest, according to Gen. Johnson, "goes right on down to the battery commander" and to all Nike personnel with special emphasis on unit and individual safety. He said that it is a matter which does not end with the commander and his safety officer, but involves training operations of the command's Nike units as well.

"A poor safety record reflects upon the training program," Gen. Johnson said, explaining that excellence in training automatically reduces accidents and consequently raises the efficiency of the command.

Vessel Hijacked By Reds Proceeds To Brazil Port

It was not known whether the marines were on board.

The hijackers have been promised asylum in Brazil, an action expected to bring strong protests from Venezuela.

Their chief aim—to prevent President Romulo Betancourt's trip to the United States—was thwarted. He went ahead with the trip, saying the Venezuelan people and armed forces back his regime.

The Brazilian marines were under orders to take control of the ship pending the arrival late tonight or early Wednesday of a Brazilian navy corvette carrying marines to escort the Anzoategui 240 miles down the coast to Belem at the mouth of the Amazon River.

There was speculation that the ship had halted off northern Brazil because it ran out of fuel or had engine trouble. The Brazilian navy is under orders to seize the ship. The navy has said the future of the hijackers—members of a Venezuelan terrorist organization—would be left to the Brazilian Foreign Ministry.

U.S. craft, hovering outside Brazilian territorial waters, kept the Anzoategui under surveillance but made no attempt to arrest it.

Brazil has promised political asylum to the hijackers when they surrender the vessel. The Venezuelan Foreign Ministry said it will demand their extradition. The ship will be returned to Venezuela presumably with its captain and most of the 35 crewmen.

Second Mate Wilmar Medina Rojas radioed that he was the only crew member involved in the seizure. The other eight men who reportedly carried out the seizure with Medina Rojas apparently were Communist terrorists smuggled aboard before the ship sailed last Tuesday for Houston, Tex., and New Orleans, La. However, it was also reported that some of the crewmen joined the insurgents and will ask asylum in Brazil.

Betancourt spent Monday night on U.S. territory—the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico—where he was hailed by large crowds and warmly greeted by his old friend Gov. Luis Munoz Marin.

Betancourt said he was not worried about the situation at home because his government is backed not only by the majority of the people but by the armed forces. Scattered terrorist shooting and bombing continued in Caracas, but Interior Minister Carlos Andres Perez, the acting president, appeared to have the situation under control.

The 3,17-ton Anzoategui, anchored in shallow water about 3,000 yards off the island of Maraca, was located by U.S. Navy planes after a wide search through the Caribbean and South Atlantic.

The Brazilian corvette Solimoes was ordered to put a detachment of Brazilian marines aboard the Anzoategui and escort it to Belem.

ing them in advance of a major news announcement.

Before the session got under way Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, fended off questions.

There was some speculation that the session was an effort by Kennedy to slam the door on any charges that his foreign policy was more partisan than bipartisan.

Not so, retorted Democratic Leader Mansfield. Republicans, he contended, had been called to the White House for consultations on foreign policy more than 40 times in Kennedy's two years in office.

Among those who attended but declined to talk about the White House meeting was Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who heads a preparedness subcommittee which plans to start an investigation this week to learn "all the facts" of Soviet military strength in Cuba.

The quiet Southerner has suggested another blockade may be necessary if the Soviet troops are not withdrawn.

McNamara is scheduled to give the Senate Armed Services Committee today a new report on American vs. Soviet military power.

Secretary of Navy Fred Korth and the chief of naval operations, Adm. George W. Anderson, told a congressional hearing that if American naval power is allowed to wane, the Soviet Union will be quick to step into the vacuum.

Cuba and Latin America were expected to be the major topic when CIA chief McCone briefs a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee at a closed session today.

Michael Taylor of Colorado College pleaded not guilty to a riotous conduct charge and Stephen Ailes, also of CC, pleaded guilty to a similar charge. Judge Asher found the first student not guilty and fined the second student $15.

of AFL-CIO International Typographical Union printers.

"I have not done it yet—both sides would not want it at this point. But I am not saying what I will do in the future," Wagner replied.

A publishers' spokesman, who had just left a City Hall meeting with the mayor, voiced doubt of any progress through further government intervention.

Walter N. Thayer, president of the Herald Tribune, said, "I am very doubtful. We may need more mediators. I do not feel that any more federal, state and city intervention would be helpful."

At Albany, Rockefeller said "the services of the state government are available for any realistic steps to bring about a settlement [illegible]

At a 3½-hour meeting Monday night, the Newspaper Unity Committee, composed of officers of the city's 10 newspaper unions, defeated a resolution recommending "that all unions resume full-scale negotiations with the publishers for the purpose of reaching an equitable settlement."

The resolution was proposed by Thomas J. Murphy, executive vice president of the AFL-CIO New York Newspaper Guild, most of whose 6,000 members are among employes idled by the blackout.

The guild, which represents editorial and commercial department workers on the nine dailies, signed new contracts with the publishers last November after an eight-day guild strike against the Daily News.

Wagner met with publishers for 2½ hours Monday. He scheduled a meeting this afternoon with the striking printers.

In Cleveland, Ohio, negotiators for the Cleveland Newspaper Guild agreed tentatively to undisclosed contract terms with that city's two dailies, subject to ratification by the membership.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer and the Press & News have been closed for 82 days by strikes of the independent Teamsters and the AFL-CIO printers, machinists and mailers.

Gas, Electric Power Record In January

Customers of the Colorado Springs Department of Public Utilities will see a hike in their electric and gas bills this month, reflecting the severe January cold temperatures.

The electric division generated a record 45,176,400 Kilowatt hours in January with a new peak hour demand established at 97,000 Kilowatts on Jan. 11. The new addition to the Martin Drake Power Plant carried some 50,000 Kilowatts of the unprecedented power demand.

Temperatures, which averaged 31.9 degrees above zero or 6.7 degrees above normal during January, demanded a tremendous gas volume. Customers of the Utilities Department used 2,375,264,000 cubic feet of gas.

Utilites Department statisticians reported that degree days, or the variation between normal 70 - degree house temperature and additional heat needed to maintain the 70 degrees, totalled 1,331 in January.

So utilities customers were working their furnaces and other heating units full blast to offset the frigid readings which included two days when the temperature averaged 13 degrees below zero.

Normal pressure was maintained thruout the local system, despite the tremendous volume of gas used. Major industrial and commercial users switched to standby fuel, oil and or coal, to conserve the available gas supply for domestic users.

Despite the curtailments, more than 100 million cubic feet of gas was used on Jan. 11, exceeding the previous high by some 20 million cubic feet for a 24-hour period.

Carson Joins Annual Army Economy Drive

Ft. Carson has joined Army installations across the country in a campaign to stetch existing funds through June 30, the close of the fiscal year.

The comptroller's office said that current appropriations generally have been less than most posts felt they needed, and that the pinch is being felt "all the way down the line."

Economy moves here have slowed civilian hiring, prompted petroleum, oil and lubrication conservation and sparked a general cutback on unnecessary expenditures.

Meanwhile individual soldiers and civilians are asked to watch their own activities for possible waste of funds or unneeded wear and tear on equipment.

Individuals have been told to practice conservation of utility costs by being sure that lights and electrical equipment are turned off when not in use and by conserving stocks of paper and other expendables whenever possible and in every way.

They are advised that careful maintenance of field and office equipment to keep that machine operating better and longer cuts repair costs.

Temporary duty trips away from Carson are being suspended except in the highest priority situations, heat in Carson buildings is being held at 65 degrees in working hours and 60 degrees at night. Quarters occupants are asked to cooperate here.

Commercial telegrams and distance telephone calls should be bypassed in favor of air mail as another cost - cutter.

the Soviet Union would drastically alter the balance of power in the world," he added.

A censored version of McNamara's prepared testimony, covering some 163 pages, was made available to newsmen outside the the closed session. It appeared identical to one supplied when he appeared before the House Armed Services Committee on Jan. 30.

McNamara was called before the Senate Armed Services Committee for testimony behind closed doors on the progress of the administration's program to build a flexible force ofstrategic weapons capable of absorbing a nuclear attack and then hitting back at the Soviet Union.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., said McNamara will be "open to questions" about Soviet military strength in Cuba and seems likely to get plenty of them.

Stennis said the preparedness subcommittee he heads will begin a concentrated investigation of the Cuban situation later in the week, after McNamara has completed his report on the military posture.

Stennis' previous statement that another blockade of Cuba may be necessary if Soviet troops there cannot be forced out by economic means was topped by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., in another furious round of congressional debate Monday.

Goldwater, an Air Force Reserve major general and a member of the Armed Services Committee, called for a blockade of all shipments of any kind to Cuba. He said the Kennedy administration ought to get up "enough gumption" to end the Communist threat to the hemisphere "once and for all."

Goldwater sailed into a statement by Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, accusing Republicans of endangering Western unity by "divisive partisanship and irresponsible attacks on our nation's foreign policy." Fulbright named Goldwater, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Goldwater said Fulbright's attack had "all the earmarks of an action hastily ordered by the White House in line with the current campaign to shut up all critics of the New Frontier's shortsighted and disruptive foreign policy and in particular, to silence all Republican opposition."

Keys told officers he ran out of the building then remembered that people were inside, returned, and helped fight the fire until 4 a.m.

Watson, a special investigator for the National Board of Fire Underwriters, arrived in Leadville Sunday afternoon to investigate the blaze, which destroyed five businesses and 12 upper floor apartments.

There were no deaths or injuries. But two residents of the apartments were forced to jump from a second story window to escape.

Today's Weather

(Reports furnished by U. S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field as of 5:30 a.m. today!)

The storm that was located over the northwestern Gulf of Mexico Monday was around the Alabama-Georgia area near sunrise, making its presense felt as far north as the Virginias and Kentucky.

Rain and showers continued over Alabama and the south Atlantic states this morning with some sectors getting well soaked. Residents in northern Florida and extreme southern Georgia had been alerted to the possibility of a few severe thundershowers and a possible isolated tornado during the morning hours.

Gusty winds caused some damage in sections of northern Florida not far from Tallahassee.

Meanwhile, a combination of rain and wet snow fell over Tennessee, Kentucky and the mountains of North Carolina and the Virginias, accumulating several inches in some localities.

Elsewhere across the country, areas of snow were scattered across the northern border states from North Dakota to northern New England.

Meantime, patches of fog, light rain and freezing drizzle added to the dismal weather scene over the Iowa-northern Missouri and eastern Nebraska region.

In the far west, a new frontal system heading toward the northwest Pacific coast was spreading rain thru Washington with the southwest remaining fair and dry.

Temperature-wise, it was again a rather mild morning for the winter season with most thermometers logging the 20s and 30s. Coldest air was located over the north central portion of the country into northern New England where the teens were common, altho the mercury plunged to subzero levels along the northern borders of Minnesota and Michigan.

Milder 40s and 50s were logged along the Pacific coast and southern border sectors with Florida remaining in the 60 and 70 degree range.

Post Damage Estimated at $142,960

The 80-mile-per-hour winds which lashed Ft. Carson Feb. 1 caused damage estimated at $142,960, according to a survey by the Post Engineer and 7th Engineer Battalion.

Barracks' roofs and the Carson fire alarm system were hit hardest by the violent chinook.

Extensive damage to the fire alarm system was estimated at $75,000. Most of this was suffered by call boxes attached to poles. The alarm system, which uses the same poles as telephone and electrical facilities, also suffered losses from frayed and fallen lines.

The firm alarm system is still in operation, however.

Wind damage to barracks' roofs in the troop area was set at $18,800 by the survey. Support Command's former area had $12,050 in roof damage.

Post Engineer and Signal Corps personnel are making repairs along with troops who are making emergency repairs in unit areas.

Fifth U.S. Army Headquarters has been asked for funds to cover damage costs. If funds are approved, some repairs may be done by private contractors.

Army Safety 'Top Priority' Directors Told

Safety directors of the Army Air Defense Command's six regions were assured Monday that safety is an area of "top priority" in considerations from the office of the President right down to the man behind the missile.

Thomas H. Wilkenson, Army director of safety, read the text of a memorandum from the White House, in which President Kennedy set forth a safety policy for the federal service as a matter of "national concern."

The President's memo calls upon heads of executive departments and agencies and their staffs to "exert leadership" in accident - prevention and safe practices programs.

The presidential memorandum and Wilkenson's remarks were reinforced by statements made in the opening address of the three-day safety conference by Maj. Gen. Dwight B. Johnson, deputy commanding general of ARADCOM.

Gen. Johnson told the delegates that they have the "command interest" and support of ARADCOM headquarters in their work and observed that the presence of Wilkenson was evidence that this support extends all the way from Department of the Army to the missile batteries of ARADCOM.

This command interest, according to Gen. Johnson, "goes right on down to the battery commander" and to all Nike personnel with special emphasis on unit and individual safety. He said that it is a matter which does not end with the commander and his safety officer, but involves training operations of the command's Nike units as well.

"A poor safety record reflects upon the training program," Gen. Johnson said, explaining that excellence in training automatically reduces accidents and consequently raises the efficiency of the command.

Vessel Hijacked By Reds Proceeds To Brazil Port

It was not known whether the marines were on board.

The hijackers have been promised asylum in Brazil, an action expected to bring strong protests from Venezuela.

Their chief aim—to prevent President Romulo Betancourt's trip to the United States—was thwarted. He went ahead with the trip, saying the Venezuelan people and armed forces back his regime.

The Brazilian marines were under orders to take control of the ship pending the arrival late tonight or early Wednesday of a Brazilian navy corvette carrying marines to escort the Anzoategui 240 miles down the coast to Belem at the mouth of the Amazon River.

There was speculation that the ship had halted off northern Brazil because it ran out of fuel or had engine trouble. The Brazilian navy is under orders to seize the ship. The navy has said the future of the hijackers—members of a Venezuelan terrorist organization—would be left to the Brazilian Foreign Ministry.

U.S. craft, hovering outside Brazilian territorial waters, kept the Anzoategui under surveillance but made no attempt to arrest it.

Brazil has promised political asylum to the hijackers when they surrender the vessel. The Venezuelan Foreign Ministry said it will demand their extradition. The ship will be returned to Venezuela presumably with its captain and most of the 35 crewmen.

Second Mate Wilmar Medina Rojas radioed that he was the only crew member involved in the seizure. The other eight men who reportedly carried out the seizure with Medina Rojas apparently were Communist terrorists smuggled aboard before the ship sailed last Tuesday for Houston, Tex., and New Orleans, La. However, it was also reported that some of the crewmen joined the insurgents and will ask asylum in Brazil.

Betancourt spent Monday night on U.S. territory—the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico—where he was hailed by large crowds and warmly greeted by his old friend Gov. Luis Munoz Marin.

Betancourt said he was not worried about the situation at home because his government is backed not only by the majority of the people but by the armed forces. Scattered terrorist shooting and bombing continued in Caracas, but Interior Minister Carlos Andres Perez, the acting president, appeared to have the situation under control.

The 3,17-ton Anzoategui, anchored in shallow water about 3,000 yards off the island of Maraca, was located by U.S. Navy planes after a wide search through the Caribbean and South Atlantic.

The Brazilian corvette Solimoes was ordered to put a detachment of Brazilian marines aboard the Anzoategui and escort it to Belem.

JFK Gives Solons Briefing on Latin American Issues

ing them in advance of a major news announcement.

Before the session got under way Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, fended off questions.

There was some speculation that the session was an effort by Kennedy to slam the door on any charges that his foreign policy was more partisan than bipartisan.

Not so, retorted Democratic Leader Mansfield. Republicans, he contended, had been called to the White House for consultations on foreign policy more than 40 times in Kennedy's two years in office.

Among those who attended but declined to talk about the White House meeting was Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who heads a preparedness subcommittee which plans to start an investigation this week to learn "all the facts" of Soviet military strength in Cuba.

The quiet Southerner has suggested another blockade may be necessary if the Soviet troops are not withdrawn.

McNamara is scheduled to give the Senate Armed Services Committee today a new report on American vs. Soviet military power.

Secretary of Navy Fred Korth and the chief of naval operations, Adm. George W. Anderson, told a congressional hearing that if American naval power is allowed to wane, the Soviet Union will be quick to step into the vacuum.

Cuba and Latin America were expected to be the major topic when CIA chief McCone briefs a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee at a closed session today.

At the request of Deputy City Attorney Bob Isaac, Judge Asher agreed to dismiss a careless driving charge against Dennis Keith, 19, 2914 W. Colorado Ave. Keith had pleaded not guilty to the charge and had also pleaded not builty to a charge of injury to city property.

The youth, who was represented by attorney Leo Rector, changed his plea to guilty on the latter charge and was fined $50 by the judge who gave him a 10-day stay of execution.

Michael Taylor of Colorado College pleaded not guilty to a riotous conduct charge and Stephen Ailes, also of CC, pleaded guilty to a similar charge. Judge Asher found the first student not guilty and fined the second student $15.

The governor, asked about school legislation, said points outlined in his fiscal message were to be considered broad general guide lines.

It is the function of the legislature, he said, to determine the exact formula for allocating state aid to schools.

Publishers Voice Doubts in News Strike Talks

of AFL-CIO International Typographical Union printers.

"I have not done that as yet—both sides would not want it at this point. But I am not saying what I will do in the future," Wagner replied.

A publishers' spokesman, who had just left a City Hall meeting with the mayor, voiced doubt of any progress through further government intervention.

Walter N. Thayer, president of the Herald Tribune, said, "I am very pessimistic. We may need an honest broker and not more mediators. I do not feel that any more federal, state and city intervention would be helpful."

At Albany, Rockefeller said "the services of the state government are available for any realistic steps to bring about a settlement of this tragic dispute."

At a 3½-hour meeting Monday night, the Newspaper Unity Committee, composed of officers of the city's 10 newspaper unions, defeated a resolution recommending "that all unions resume full-scale negotiations with the publishers for the purpose of reaching an equitable settlement."

The resolution was proposed by Thomas J. Murphy, executive vice president of the AFL-CIO New York Newspaper Guild, most of whose 6,000 members are among employes idled by the blackout.

The guild, which represents editorial and commercial department workers on the nine dailies, signed new contracts with the publishers last November after an eight-day guild strike against the Daily News.

Wagner met with publishers for 2½ hours Monday. He scheduled a meeting this afternoon with the striking printers.

In Cleveland, Ohio, negotiators for the Cleveland Newspaper Guild agreed tentatively to undisclosed contract terms with that city's two dailies, pending ratification by the membership.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer and the Press & News have been closed for 82 days by strikes of the guild, the independent Teamsters and the AFL-CIO printers, machinists and mailers.

Anchorage Still Being Sought For Polaris

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is still seeking a permanent anchorage for the three-ship force of Polaris missile submarines it will station in the Mediterranean six weeks from now.

Until some country agrees or some arrangement is made to harbor them, it will use the Holy Loch, Scotland, base of the North Atlantic Polaris squadron as the overseas maintenance point for the Mediterranean group.

Gilpatric, returning from the trip, confirmed officially the previous unofficial report current in Rome that three Polaris submarines with their total of 48 missiles, will begin reaching deployment positions somewhere in the Mediterranean about April 1.

Operational command of the Polaris force in the Mediterranean, Gilpatric told newsmen, will be under Lemnitzer, as the NATO European commander.

The European trip from which Gilpatric returned evidently involved discussions of the Polaris force only with the two NATO officials.

MY ANSWER
by Billy Graham

© 1963 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: What do you mean when you say that man is a free moral agent? —W. E.

ANSWER: God created man with the freedom of choice. He did not make us puppets or automatons or robots. At the best, this would have been a very low form of creation. But, He created us in His own image with the capacity to choose, to will, to make decisions. This is what we mean when we say that man is a free moral agent. But, because of sin in our hearts, the result of our inheritance and also of our choice, we are now what the Bible calls the servants of sin. However, God still gives to us the privilege of turning back to Him. We cannot do this in our own strength but God's Holy Spirit is working in the hearts of men, urging them to repent and turn from sin and believe in Christ as Saviour. The Bibe contains a series of events where men are urged to choose, to stand on God's side and to accept Him. For instance, in the Old Testament we find these words of Moses to the children of Israel: "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." In the New Testament John writes: "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Almost the last verse in the Bible says: "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." The choice is for you to make.

DON'T GIVE UP

NEW YORK (UPI)—The old Bijou, Broadway's smallest legitimate theater, has endured many vicissitudes in recent times. For years, it has been too small to be of any value to stage producers, who need houses with a lot of seats in order to make any money these high-cost days. Last fall it was taken over for film purposes (again) and renamed the Griffith (after the late D. W.), the idea being to use it as a showcase for silent film classics. That didn't work. Now it has been given a Japanese decor and renamed the Toho Cinema, to be the local outlet of the better movies from Japan's prolific Toho Company.

Anchorage Still Being Sought For Polaris

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is still seeking a permanent anchorage for the three-ship force of Polaris missile submarines it will station in the Mediterranean six weeks from now.

Until some country agrees or some arrangement is made to harbor them, it will use the Holy Loch, Scotland, base of the North Atlantic Polaris squadron as the overseas maintenance point for the Mediterranean group.

Gilpatric, returning from the trip, confirmed officially the previous unofficial report current in Rome that three Polaris submarines with their total of 48 missiles, will begin reaching deployment positions somewhere in the Mediterranean about April 1.

Operational command of the Polaris force in the Mediterranean, Gilpatric told newsmen, will be under Lemnitzer, as the NATO European commander.

The European trip from which Gilpatric returned evidently involved discussions of the Polaris force only with the two NATO officials.

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

© 1963 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

ANSWER: God created man with the freedom of choice. He did not make us puppets or automatons or robots. At the best, this would have been a very low form of creation. But, He created us in His own image with the capacity to choose, to will, to make decisions. This is what we mean when we say that man is a free moral agent. But, because of sin in our hearts, the result of our inheritance and also of our choice, we are now what the Bible calls the servants of sin. However, God still gives to us the privilege of turning back to Him. We cannot do this in our own strength but God's Holy Spirit is working in the hearts of men, urging them to repent and turn from sin and believe in Christ as Saviour. The Bibe contains a series of events where men are urged to choose, to stand on God's side and to accept Him. For instance, in the Old Testament we find these words of Moses to the children of Israel: "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." In the New Testament John writes: "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Almost the last verse in the Bible says: "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." The choice is for you to make.

DON'T GIVE UP

NEW YORK (UPI)—The old Bijou, Broadway's smallest legitimate theater, has endured many vicissitudes in recent times. For years, it has been too small to be of any value to stage producers, who need houses with a lot of seats in order to make any money these high-cost days. Last fall it was taken over for film purposes (again) and renamed the Griffith (after the late D. W.), the idea being to use it as a showcase for silent film classics. That didn't work. Now it has been given a Japanese decor and renamed the Toho Cinema, to be the local outlet of the better movies from Japan's prolific Toho Company.

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

Off the Hook — On the Spot

A letter has come from our perpetual critic, C. M. Holloway of Green Mountain Falls. Mr. Holloway is apparently greatly distressed because our television program seems to be clarifying certain issues which we possibly had failed in clarifying before.

Perhaps this is as good a time as any to explain that we have often felt that somehow we are not always able to convey our real meanings by the printed word alone. It happens that the philosophy we espouse is so universally desirable, contains so much beauty and is so closely akin to reality that were we able to express ourselves with the clarity we yearn to possess, we are certain everyone would agree with it. The problem is our own and relates to our shortcomings in communicating what we really mean.

By using television, we are saying essentially what we have always said on the editorial page. But the anonymity required in a newspaper editorial vanishes under the all-seeing gaze of that red-eyed monster, the TV camera.

If Mr. Holloway will bother to take notes on what we say on TV and compare those notes to what we say on this page, he will find no inconsistency.

Or, if we err at one or another point it will be because we are wrong. And we would appreciate being told of our error if we make one, which is always an infinitely great possibility.

But, we suspect that what Mr. Holloway is principally upset about is the fact that by our being on television we are in a better position to disprove the canards and false accusations constantly made against us by our detractors such as Mr. Holloway.

Notice how he says, "You despise the Constitution." This is not true. It is probably the finest constitution which has ever been devised by man.

It is also true that it has many parallels with other constitutions, including that of Russia. It is also true that many things many people believe it contains as safeguards for their freedoms, simply are not in it.

When we utter these truths, does it mean that we "despise" the Constitution? Only to Mr. Holloway and others who desire above everything to see unionism or collectivism triumph in Colorado Springs.

We do not think that the Constitution is a holy instrument struck off by the hands of angels. We think it has flaws in it. And we think one of the most serious things that people can do respecting it is to place it on a par with an object of worship to the point where no intelligent inquiry can be made concerning it.

If one inquires about it, does this mean that one despises it? That is Mr. Holloway's invention.

Again, he says that we "deplore the U.S. school system." Again, not so. We deplore the compulsion and violence by means of which the system is supported. Are they the same thing? We don't think so.

We say again as we have said many times: We favor education. We want to see more and better schools. We simply wish to see the schools separated from the government.

Some people in ancient times championed the idea of separation of church and state. Were they villains? Were they "deploring" either church or state?

No, they were asking for a separation. We are asking for a separation between school and state. Does that make us villains? Mr. Holloway wants you to think so.

Now, Mr. Holloway says we "believe in ruthless 'social Darwinism.'" It would be hard to confirm or deny this until we know what he means by the phrase.

If he means that we wish people in society to be free to select their own friends and neighbors, earn their own money, make their own investments, save what they can, hire their own doctor, their own teachers, their own business people and otherwise mind their own business. . .and if this is social Darwinism, then that is what we are for.

If, on the other hand, "ruthless social Darwinism" is the dog-eat-dog concept advanced by Holloway, that the strong shall politically control the weak; that it is not good for man to be free; that no man is good without the fear of arrest or a jail sentence; then this is not what we believe.

If he will explain what he means, we will be happy to answer to it.

But the truly amusing predicament into which Holloway's distress commits him is found in the contradiction between his last sentence second paragraph, and his final sentence. In the former he says that we present the image of a "comfortable old burgomeister serenely content with the status quo." Then in the next sentence he says that while we have a right to our opinions, they are quite "strange."

If language has meaning, then it would seem that anyone upholding the status quo could hardly be giving voice to "strange" views. Conversely, if the views expressed are "strange" then, surely, they are contrary to the "status quo."

What we suspect is that by our employing this additional medium, Holloway has discovered that our "strange" views aren't really as strange as he and others would like to have you believe. And, like anyone else, he dislikes being caught in a major error.

All that we can say is that we are going to keep on trying to answer questions put to us. Some of the questions are very difficult and many are long and involved requiring far more time to answer than is provided in thirty minutes.

But we'll do the best we can.

General and Specific

Lots of people speak up all the time in favor of economy in a general way and expenditures specifically in their own direction.

Trouble on the Transports

Government - backed unions headed by John L. Lewis wreaked such havoc in the coal industry that from being a major fuel, coal has dropped to a number three position in the nation.

But the damage done to coal mining particularly and to mining generally, is scarcely to be compared to the devastation discernible in the American Merchant Marine.

Here, thanks to government intervention and union truculence, American cargo ships are now employed in such a small fraction of tonnage movements as to make one wonder if we have any of our merchant marine left at all.

Whether the problem began with government subsidy or with union greed isn't known. But both factors have arisen to haunt our once proud and mighty merchant fleet.

In 1946, right after World War II, U.S. merchant ships carried 75 per cent of all U.S. shipping. In 1960 that proportion had dropped to just over 10 per cent.

While ship-building and ship operation over the world has increased in the past five years from a total of more than 15 thousand ships to nearly 17½ thousand, American participation in world trade in its own bottoms has dropped to about 900 and most of these vessels are practically obsolete. And at that, less than 50 per cent of the capacity is being employed.

U.S. shipbuilding has been declining year by year. This year only 58 new ships are under construction. Last year 64 were built. In 1958 we came out with 71.

Now, put these facts against the background of increased American foreign trade and you have got something that adds up to catastrophic proportions. There are 18 separate unions dealing in maritime affairs. Any one of the unions can and will call a strike for anything from a major dispute to a case of personal pique.

And the government, backing up the union as is its custom, stands by to assist in subsidizing management to capitulate and the hit and run is on.

More than $200 million annually is provided by the taxpayers, mostly to make up the fantastically high wages of mariners. Did you know that an able bodied seaman can command a base pay of $175 per week, which is 50 per cent higher than the national average of all workers in industry? It's a fact. The daily wage rate on a small cargo ship comes to $1,334. The same ship flying the British Union Jack will pay $882 as a daily wage rate. A German ship will pay less than $300 for the same service.

And when you add up the "fringe benefits" given to mariners you find that it costs a shipping company about $10,000 per year for an ordinary seaman, and masters get about $1,500 per month, about par for a four-star Navy admiral.

Then consider that featherbedding is a constant practice of these maritime unions, which have little difficulty in signing on a crew 25 per cent larger than job specifications, and you've got a pretty close view of what is going on on the high seas and in port cities.

One noted maritime lawyer has observed that in a short time, if the present practices continue, the shipping problem for Americans will be solved for all time. There won't be any. All business will be done aboard foreign flags.

This particular instance of rampant unionism backed up by rampant big government is indicative of the major social illness we have in this nation. There is an idea that an ordinary worker should make a wage befitting a king, regardless of what he does or how long he works. Emphasis has been not on producing something but on benefits, subsidies and a guaranteed "living wage." Nor will a batch of predatory laws set up to clamp down on unions or providing new subsidies solve the problem. "Living wages" can't be paid by a dying industry. But so long as people believe they can get something for nothing if only they have the government in their corner, so long will we have politicians to deal with, instead of the facts of life.

It's the seamen themselves who are going to have to solve their own problem. And they can begin to solve it only by refusing utterly to join up with a union or to demand tax support. It's going to take a major jolt to convince them that this is so. But it is so, and sooner or later they will know it.

ON THE SPOT

To the Editor:

Your TV show, "Editor on the Spot," is misleading in its entirety. In the first place, the title itself is not accurate in that the way you cleverly wriggle yourself from the "spot" leads me to suggest a new title: "Editor off the Hook," or perhaps "Editor Dodges the Spot" would be more appropriate.

Your "show" is not consistent with your daily column wherein you exhibit far greater courage. Could this be because your name is never found in your column? Viewing you, one would never suspect that you despise the U.S. Constitution, deplore the U.S. school system, or believe in ruthless "social Darwinism." You present the image of a comfortable old burgomeister serenely content with the status quo.

In spite of my criticism, I must admit that I admire your aplomb and certainly agree that you are entitled to your opinions, strange though they may be.

ARMY TALK

To the Editor:

In reply to 1st Sgt. John H. Trussell: I think you need straightening out too, bud. No, the army of today is not like World War II and things were really tough those days at $50 per month, no housing, no care for our dependents to run to with a bellyache and ration stamps a must to eat and buy clothes. Would you like the army and want to be an army man at this rate of pay, and all the overtime you talk about? Could you live or would you live on the post and your family paying their own way, no extra money, no housing?

We paid our insurance, taxes and even had to buy bonds out of $50 per month. If your wife didn't work, no food or any place to live. And you write such stuff about army pay. Brother, you don't know how the people on the outside live. They pay taxes and pay ownership tax on everything, and when the bell rings to stop work they rush home to the family, but I think I see the soldiers rush home, too, on that Highway 115. Well, they are lucky they can go home, as the World War II soldier didn't get to go home only on a two or three-day pass. And all the overtime we get working now don't amount up to what you get. And the wives couldn't bum around all over the world on Uncle Sam's money and not just a day or two but two or three years at a time.

They had the best soldiers in the world at World War II and they were not all drunkards. I see plenty now, and more children running along and one on the way. If they had to pay to have all these children, would they?

You are so mighty, why not live on the post, some more free stuff? I do think that a small army man should have a raise but some of you rate too much. Could you live on $300 per month outside? And don't think in World War II that things were cheap; no, indeed, they were not. And don't forget our overtime in the army. We didn't get any overtime pay at $50 per month, and couldn't afford a car. You have hospitals even after the army. You can retire and take other jobs and still get your army pay or most of it. Stop reading army comics in the paper and you have the world by the tail.

Yes, lots of government men get too much money, and so did Eisenhower; if he wanted to be president he should never have gotten more money after his days were over. No other president did, and he certainly wasn't great.

Well, enough said, but I didn't sleep thinking about what you wrote. As I see my man come in and can't hardly walk, and from World War II, can he get an increase in pay? And he still can't get any better. And what would we eat if he goes to the hospital—grass? Why do you have to be so great today?

OWNERSHIP

To the Editor:

God did not give the earth, the land, to "man in common." He gave it to those individuals who put it to productive use and increase its yield: to those who, with their love and labor, make it flower and grow. For only thus may the earth be made to feed and provide for its teeming millions.

And only these—those who have earned it and continue to earn it—does he permit to keep it.

There is more, much more, in the free, competitive market place than meets the undiscerning eye. There is JUSTICE there! And this is a word we all acclaim except, perhaps, when it applies to us.

The market giveth, and the market taketh away.

The Most Significant Economic Event of 1962

By FRED G. CLARK AND RICHARD STANTON RIMANOCZY

If economic events were always based on economics, life would be far simpler.

The fly in the economic ointment is politics; it always has been and probably always will be.

Here are three simple examples.

Political action, such as granting labor unions exemption from anti-monopoly laws, can alter the business life of an entire nation.

Political attitudes toward the legal rights of strikers can alter the most basic right of private enterprise — the right of a person (or group of persons) to make gainful use of his private property.

Political decisions regarding the monetization of public debt (which is worse than printing greenbacks) can disrupt the best laid modernization and expansion plans of business.

These three examples (which could be far more numerous) are mentioned because everyone can now see them at work.

The year 1962, however, brought a new demonstration of political interference in economics; for the first time since America freed itself from English rule, business was denied the right — during a time of peace — to decide the prices at which it would try to sell its products.

The true significance of this unparalleled precedent-seting action was lost in a melodrama of conflicting personalities, midnight cloak-and-dagger activity, name-calling, and emotional journalism.

To the unthinking public Roger Blough of U. S. Steel was the dragon and John F. Kenedy of the White House was St. George.

Public reaction amounted to emotional approval of a gross and overt violation of the basic right that sets the free market economy apart from government dictated economics.

The public did not see this because in modern jargon there are so many "good" words to describe bad actions, and so many "bad" words to describe good actions, that the man on the street has been brainwashed concerning the basic function of private enterprise.

Getting back to the truth is easy if we only stick to the fundamentals which everybody knows but most have forgotten.

The essence of economic progress is free competition and the essence of free competition is the right to ask the customer for as much or as little as is deemed best for business.

This is nobody's business but the business itself.

If its judgment is wrong, the business pays the penalty.

If an increase in steel prices would have been wrong, the customers would have soon found lower-priced sources of steel and no harm would have been done except to the steel companies themselves.

The big point, however, is that up to now, government, in times of peace, has never assumed the power to interfere with competitive pricing.

That is why, to us, the steel price case was 1962's most significant and far-reaching economic event.

Allen-Scott Report

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — How the Kennedy administration loves those $1,000-a-plate fund - raising dinners!

The one held in the capital last month, to celebrate the New Frontier's second anniversary, was so lushly lucrative that at least three others are contemplated.

The next one will be in Los Angeles in April. Others definitely slated are in Chicago and New York, with Miami a strong possibility. The dates are still open.

The President will attend each of these affairs and deliver a speech.

According to National Chairman John Bailey, the anniversary celebration netted a clear $1.2 million.

Ambitious goal of the $1,000-a-plate dinner plan is to raise $2.5 million for the Democratic committee's coffers. Bailey and his lieutenants estimate that is needed to meet the committee's mounting operating expenses and to prepare for next year's tough presidential battle.

Privately they now expect it to be rough and costly, and far more uncertain than they hoped it would be.

Bailey and National Treasurer Richard Maguire are no longer talking about raising money to pay the committee's debt from the 1960 race. Actually that was cleared more than a year ago, but for a long time this one $900,000 obligation was a handy bogeyman to wheedle contributions from the faithful — and others.

Now Bailey and Maguire are stressing the national committee's heavy expenses and need to get ready for next year's arduous election struggle.

WHERE IT'S GOING

Committee insiders say its expenses are running at around $100,000 a month.

One reason cited for this is a "fixed charge" of $20,000 a month — $10,000 each to the Senate and House Democratic Campaign Committees. In return for these monthly checks, the two committees have merged their fund-raising activities with those of the national committee.

Also under consideration is setting up a pulse-feeling agency in the national committee.

This proposed polling outfit would supplant the private organizations that have been hired for this work. The President and his political leaders are strong believers in polls and use them constantly. But they had some disconcerting experiences with private pollsters last year.

One was in Kentucky, where Republican Senator Thruston Morton won re-election by a big majority. The administration's pollsters came up with figures showing he would be decisively defeated. They were equally wrong in adjoining Indiana. There the pollsters gave the victory to Republican Senator Homer Capehart, only to have his youthful Democratic opponent, Birch Bayh, win by a good margin.

Attorney General Robert Kennedy, the real backstage ruler of the national ruler committee, favors establishing its own polling organization. The President also is credited as being for that.

The big problem is how much it will cost, and that is now under study.

ALWAYS UNDER FOOT

There is one Washington news photographer who is thoroly fed up "with the Kennedys," and makes no bones about it.

He voiced these indignant feelings after an experience with Senator Ted Kennedy, ambitious 30-year-old brother of the President. The photographer, assigned to cover a dinner for new senators, spotted Wisconsin's new Senator Gaylor Nelson chatting with Louisiana's veteran Senator Russell Long.

The cameraman asked them to pose for a shot. As he was focusing to snap a picture, young Kennedy, who had been standing nearby, strode over and without being asked placed himself between Long and Nelson, with an arm on each so he couldn't be squeezed out.

Angry but unable to do anything about the matter, the photographer irately snapped one picture and then stalked away, remarking loudly:

"That's what I can't stand about these Kennedys. They're always pushing themselves. You can never get away from them. They not only tell you what to do, but how to do it; what profile they want taken, and how many pictures. I'm fed up, but how do you get rid of them?"

POLITICAL:

Attorney General Robert Kennedy is still being needled about that long-standing vacancy on the federal bench in New Mexico. Bureaucratic Arrogance

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, Ph.D.

Just the other night we heard a city manager of a Southern California city make this statement. It is up to the city to provide emergency ambulance service because the city can provide this service cheaper than can a private ambulance service. He then went on to explain how ambulance service by the city would cost less because policemen would man the station wagons converted to ambulances. He then went on to talk about the first aid classes for the members of the police force and a few other items, the cost of which had to be paid by the taxpayers and wound up explaining that a charge of $15 per call would be less than $22.50 charged by the private enterprise ambulance service.

What he did not mention was that if the private enterprise concern was exempt from federal, state, county and local taxes and a multitude of governmental controls, regulations and oppressive influences, the private enterprise concern could obviously provide better service for less money.

He did not mention the fact that if the city did not create a monopoly by licensing certain firms to engage in this service business, competition and the normal operation of the market place would provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost.

The city involved purchased a dozen station wagons which were modified to provide a limited ambulance vehicle. The city trained its entire police force in first aid at the expense of the taxpayers. The city manager pretends that a police officer may be an ambulance attendant and a police officer at the same time and handle both jobs adequately. The city-created emergency ambulance service pretends to be concerned with emergency health problems of the population of the city when, in truth, the city is only concerned with increasing the size and the cost and the power of the city government.

What can the taxpayers in this city do about the situation?

In the first place, most of them will be foolish enough to believe that big government can operate on a less costly basis than can private enterprise. They will be entirely satisfied with this deal until something happens to one of them because the station wagons aren't really ambulances or a policeman isn't a trained ambulance attendant.

Others, if they are conscious, can demand the services of a private ambulance or a physician. If they are not conscious, they will be depending upon hope, good luck and a variety of intangibles. They can also move away from government of this kind. They can depend upon their family, those who may pass by at the time of an accident or sudden illness or their own private religious beliefs. They can remember that for maximum security they can depend upon penal institutions and other institutional facilities provided by government.

If a man is ever to be alone for even a minute, he should realize there are times when he must depend upon himself or those who may be close at hand. If a man wants to live in freedom, he should realize he will find it necessary to depend upon himself or those close at hand more frequently than if he is willing to exist in bondage.

We live 25 miles from the closest medical or emergency service. There are quite a few people here who are well over 75 years of age and a few active people who would probably be bedridden if they lived in a heavily populated area. It might take 20 to 25 minutes to get a critically ill person to a hospital or a doctor, but I well remember waiting almost two hours for the police to answer a call when a burglar paid us a visit one early morning and we lived a block and a half from the police station.

Bureaucratic arrogance is more than happy to take over every aspect of your existence. In this manner, bureaucracy grows and prospers.

Good health and good luck to you, in Freedom.

Question Box

Question No. 143: "How could Russia be evicted from the United Nations by merely voting in the General Assembly that the U.S.S.R. seat be declared vacant, when the U.N. Constitution (Charter) reads:

"'The General Assembly can do nothing more than make recommendations and must refer all of its suggestions to the Security Council for action.' (Articles 11-14.)

"This makes the Security Council the only legally binding legislative body in the U.N. and as Russia is one of the five members of the Security Council and has a 'veto,' how could they be evicted?" Signed: Blanche Hays, Huntington Beach.

Answer: We believe Reader Hays has summed up the sections of the Charter in her statement, altho not the exact wording. And under the U.N. Charter, if it were followed, we do not see how a permanent member of the Security Council with veto power, such as Russia, could be expelled.

But in 1950, the United Nations set the procedure to bypass the Charter. The Security Council, in the absence of Russia declared the communist invasion of South Korea a breach of the peace, despite the fact the Charter required concurrence of all permanent members of the Security Council in such actions. The General Assembly ratified this action.

This, according to Dr. V. Orval Watts in "Should We Strengthen the United Nations," had the effect "to transform the United Nations into a possible agency for unlimited government, and to transfer the seat of power from the Security Council to the assembly."

Off the Hook—On the Spot

A letter has come from our perpetual critic, C. M. Holloway of Green Mountain Falls. Mr. Holloway is apparently greatly distressed because our television program seems to be clarifying certain issues which we possibly had failed in clarifying before.

Perhaps this is as good a time as any to explain that we have often felt that somehow we are not always able to convey our real meanings by the printed word alone. It happens that the philosophy we espouse is so universally desirable, contains so much beauty and is so closely akin to reality that were we able to express ourselves with the clarity we yearn to possess, we are certain everyone would agree with it. The problem is our own and relates to our shortcomings in communicating what we really mean.

By using television, we are saying essentially what we have always said on the editorial page. But the anonymity required in a newspaper editorial vanishes under the all-seeing gaze of that red-eyed monster, the TV camera.

If Mr. Holloway will bother to take notes on what we say on TV and compare those notes to what we say on this page, he will find no inconsistency.

Or, if we err at one or another point it will be because we are wrong. And we would appreciate being told of our error if we make one, which is always an infinitely great possibility.

But, we suspect that what Mr. Holloway is principally upset about is the fact that by our being on television we are in a better position to disprove the canards and false accusations constantly made against us by our detractors such as Mr. Holloway.

Notice how he says, "You despise the Constitution." This is not true. It is probably the finest constitution which has ever been devised by man.

It is also true that it has many parallels with other constitutions, including that of Russia. It is also true that many things many people believe it contains as safeguards for their freedoms, simply are not in it.

When we utter these truths, does it mean that we "despise" the Constitution? Only to Mr. Holloway and others who desire above everything to see unionism or collectivism triumph in Colorado Springs.

We do not think that the Constitution is a holy instrument struck off by the hands of angels. We think it has flaws in it. And we think one of the most serious things that people can do respecting it is to place it on a par with an object of worship to the point where no intelligent inquiry can be made concerning it.

If one inquires about it, does this mean that one despises it? That is Mr. Holloway's invention.

Again, he says that we "deplore the U.S. school system." Again, not so. We deplore the compulsion and violence by means of which the system is supported. Are they the same thing? We don't think so.

We say again as we have said many times: We favor education. We want to see more and better schools. We simply wish to see the schools separated from the government.

Some people in ancient times championed the idea of separation of church and state. Were they villains? Were they "deploring" either church or state?

No, they were asking for a separation. We are asking for a separation between school and state. Does that make us villains? Mr. Holloway wants you to think so.

Now, Mr. Holloway says we "believe in ruthless 'social Darwinism.'" It would be hard to confirm or deny this until we know what he means by the phrase.

If he means that we wish people in society to be free to select their own friends and neighbors, earn their own money, make their own investments, save what they can, hire their own doctor, their own teachers, their own business people and otherwise mind their own business . . and if this is social Darwinism, then that is what we are for.

If, on the other hand, "ruthless social Darwinism" is the dog-eat-dog concept advanced by Holloway, that the strong shall politically control the weak; that it is not good for man to be free; that no man is good without the fear of arrest or a jail sentence; then this is not what we believe.

If he will explain what he means, we will be happy to answer to it.

But the truly amusing predicament into which Holloway's distress commits him is found in the contradiction between his last sentence second paragraph, and his final sentence. In the former he says that we present the image of a "comfortable old burgomeister serenely content with the status quo." Then in the next sentence he says that while we have a right to our opinions, they are quite "strange."

If language has meaning, then it would seem that anyone upholding the status quo could hardly be giving voice to "strange" views. Conversely, if the views expressed are "strange" then, surely, they are contrary to the "status quo."

What we suspect is that by our employing this additional medium, Holloway has discovered that our "strange" views aren't really as strange as he and others would like to have you believe. And, like anyone else, he dislikes being caught in a major error.

All that we can say is that we are going to keep on trying to answer questions put to us. Some of the questions are very difficult and many are long and involved requiring far more time to answer than is provided in thirty minutes.

But we'll do the best we can.

General and Specific

Lots of people speak up all the time in favor of economy in a general way and expenditures specifically in their own direction.

Trouble on the Transports

Government - backed unions headed by John L. Lewis wreaked such havoc in the coal industry that from being a major fuel, coal has dropped to a number three position in the nation.

But the damage done to coal mining particularly and to mining generally, is scarcely to be compared to the devastation discernible in the American Merchant Marine.

Here, thanks to government intervention and union truculence, American cargo ships are now employed in such a small fraction of tonnage movements as to make one wonder if we have any of our merchant marine left at all.

Whether the problem began with government subsidy or with union greed isn't known. But both factors have arisen to haunt our once proud and mighty merchant fleet.

In 1946, right after World War II, U.S. merchant ships carried 75 per cent of all U.S. shipping. In 1960 that proportion had dropped to just over 10 per cent.

While ship-building and ship operation over the world has increased in the past five years from a total of more than 15 thousand ships to nearly 17½ thousand, American participation in world trade in its own bottoms has dropped to about 900 and most of these vessels are practically obsolete. And at that, less than 50 per cent of the capacity is being employed.

U.S. shipbuilding has been declining year by year. This year only 58 new ships are under construction. Last year 64 were built. In 1958 we came out with 71.

Now, put these facts against the background of increased American foreign trade and you have got something that adds up to catastrophic proportions. There are 18 separate unions dealing in maritime affairs. Any one of the unions can and will call a strike for anything from a major dispute to a case of personal pique.

And the government, backing up the union as is its custom, stands by to assist in subsidizing management to capitulate and the hit and run is on.

More than $200 million annually is provided by the taxpayers, mostly to make up the fantastically high wages of mariners. Did you know that an able bodied seaman can command a base pay of $175 per week, which is 50 per cent higher than the national average of all workers in industry? It's a fact. The daily wage rate on a small cargo ship comes to $1,334. The same ship flying the British Union Jack will pay $352 as a daily wage rate. A German ship will pay less than $300 for the same service.

And when you add up the "fringe benefits" given to mariners you find that it costs a shipping company about $10,000 per year for an ordinary seaman, and masters get about $1,500 per month, about par for a four-star Navy admiral.

Then consider that featherbedding is a constant practice of these maritime unions, which have little difficulty in signing on a crew 25 per cent larger than job specifications, and you've got a pretty close view of what is going on on the high seas and in port cities.

One noted maritime lawyer has observed that in a short time, if the present practices continue, the shipping problem for Americans will be solved for all time. There won't be any. All business will be done aboard foreign flags.

This particular instance of rampant unionism backed up by rampant big government is indicative of the major social illness we have in this nation. There is an idea that an ordinary worker should make a wage befitting a king, regardless of what he does or how long he works. Emphasis has been not on producing something but on benefits, subsidies and a guaranteed "living wage." Nor will a batch of predatory laws set up to clamp down on unions or providing new subsidies solve the problem. "Living wages" can't be paid by a dying industry. But so long as people believe they can get something for nothing if only they have the government in their corner, so long will we have politicians to deal with, instead of the facts of life.

It's the seamen themselves who are going to have to solve their own problem. And they can begin to solve it only by refusing utterly to join up with a union or to demand tax support. It's going to take a major jolt to convince them that this is so. But it is so, and sooner or later they will know it.

ON THE SPOT

To the Editor:

Your TV show, "Editor on the Spot," is misleading in its entirety. In the first place, the title itself is not accurate in that the way you cleverly wriggle yourself from the "spot" leads me to suggest a new title: "Editor off the Hook," or perhaps "Editor Dodges the Spot" would be more appropriate.

Your "show" is not consistent with your daily column wherein you exhibit far greater courage. Could this be because your name is never found in your column? Viewing you, one would never suspect that you despise the U.S. Constitution, deplore the U.S. school system, or believe in ruthless "social Darwinism." You present the image of a comfortable old burgomeister serenely content with the status quo.

In spite of my criticism, I must admit that I admire your aplomb and certainly agree that you are entitled to your opinions, strange though they may be.

ARMY TALK

To the Editor:

In reply to 1st Sgt. John H. Trussell: I think you need straightening out too, bud. No, the army of today is not like World War II and things were really tough those days at $50 per month, no housing, no care for our dependents to run to with a bellyache and ration stamps a must to eat and buy clothes. Would you like the army and want to be an army man at this rate of pay, and all the overtime you talk about? Could you live or would you live on the post and your family paying their own way, no extra money, no housing?

We paid our insurance, taxes and even had to buy bonds out of $50 per month. If your wife didn't work, no food or any place to live. And you write such stuff about army pay. Brother, you don't know how the people on the outside live. They pay taxes and pay ownership tax on everything, and when the bell rings to stop work they rush home to the family, but I think I see the soldiers rush home, too, on that Highway 115. Well, they are lucky they can go home, as the World War II soldier didn't get to go home only on a two or three-day pass. And all the overtime we get working now don't amount up to what you get. And the wives couldn't bum around all over the world on Uncle Sam's money and not just a day or two but two or three years at a time.

They had the best soldiers in the world at World War II and they were not all drunkards. I see plenty now, and more children running along and one on the way. If they had to pay to have all these children, would they?

You are so mighty, why not live on the post, some more free stuff? I do think that a small army man should have a raise but some of you rate too much. Could you live on $300 per month outside? And don't think in World War II that things were cheap; no, indeed, they were not. And don't forget our overtime in the army. We didn't get any overtime pay at $50 per month, and couldn't afford a car. You have hospitals even after the army. You can retire and take other jobs and still get your army pay or most of it. Stop reading army comics in the paper and you have the world by the tail.

Yes, lots of government men get too much money, and so did Eisenhower; if he wanted to be president he should never have gotten more money after his days were over. No other president did, and he certainly wasn't great.

Well, enough said, but I didn't sleep thinking about what you wrote. As I see my man come in and can't hardly walk, and from World War II, can he get an increase in pay? And he still can't get any better. And what would we eat if he goes to the hospital—grass? Why do you have to be so great today?

OWNERSHIP

To the Editor:

God did not give the earth, the land, to "man in common." He gave it to those individuals who put it to productive use and increase its yield; to those who, with their love and labor, make it flower and grow. For only thus may the earth be made to feed and provide for its teeming millions.

And only these—those who have earned it and continue to earn it—does he permit to keep it.

There is more, much more, in the free, competitive market place than meets the undiscerning eye. There is JUSTICE there! And this is a word we all acclaim except, perhaps, when it applies to us.

The market giveth, and the market taketh away.

By FRED G. CLARK AND RICHARD STANTON RIMANOCZY

If economic events were always based on economics, life would be far simpler.

The fly in the economic ointment is politics; it always has been and probably always will be.

Here are three simple examples.

Political action, such as granting labor unions exemption from anti-monopoly laws, can alter the business life of an entire nation.

Political attitudes toward the legal rights of strikers can alter the most basic right of private enterprise — the right of a person (or group of persons) to make gainful use of his private property.

Political decisions regarding the monetization of public debt (which is worse than printing greenbacks) can disrupt the best laid modernization and expansion plans of business.

These three examples (which could be far more numerous) are mentioned because everyone can now see them at work.

The year 1962, however, brought a new demonstration of political interference in economics; for the first time since America freed itself from English rule, business was denied the right — during a time of peace — to decide the prices at which it would try to sell its products.

The true significance of this unparalleled precedent-seting action was lost in a melodrama of conflicting personalities, midnight cloak-and-dagger activity, name-calling, and emotional journalism.

To the unthinking public Roger Blough of U. S. Steel was the dragon and John F. Kenedy of the White House was St. George.

Public reaction amounted to emotional approval of a gross and overt violation of the basic right that sets the free market economy apart from government dictated economics.

The public did not see this because in modern jargon there are so many "good" words to describe bad actions, and so many "bad" words to describe good actions, that the man on the street has been brainwashed concerning the basic function of private enterprise.

Getting back to the truth is easy if we only stick to the fundamentals which everybody knows but most have forgotten.

The essence of economic progress is free competition and the essence of free competition is the right to ask the customer for as much or as little as is deemed best for business.

This is nobody's business but the business itself.

If its judgment is wrong, the business pays the penalty.

If an increase in steel prices would have been wrong, the customers would have soon found lower-priced sources of steel and no harm would have been done except to the steel companies themselves.

The big point, however, is that up to now, government, in times of peace, has never assumed the power to interfere with competitive pricing.

That is why, to us, the steel price case was 1962's most significant and far-reaching economic event.

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — How the Kennedy administration loves those $1,000-a-plate fund - raising dinners!

The one held in the capital last month, to celebrate the New Frontier's second anniversary, was so lushly lucrative that at least three others are contemplated.

The next one will be in Los Angeles in April. Others definitely slated are in Chicago and New York, with Miami a strong possibility. The dates are still open.

The President will attend each of these affairs and deliver a speech.

According to National Chairman John Bailey, the anniversary celebration netted a clear $1.2 million.

Ambitious goal of the $1,000-a-plate dinner plan is to raise $2.5 million for the Democratic committee's coffers. Bailey and his lieutenants estimate that is needed to meet the committee's mounting operating expenses and to prepare for next year's tough presidential battle.

Privately they now expect it to be rough and costly, and far more uncertain than they hoped it would be.

Bailey and National Treasurer Richard Maguire are no longer talking about raising money to pay the committee's debt from the 1960 race. Actually that was cleared more than a year ago, but for a long time this one $900,000 obligation was a handy bogeyman to wheedle contributions from the faithful — and others.

Now Bailey and Maguire are stressing the national committee's heavy expenses and need to get ready for next year's arduous election struggle.

WHERE IT'S GOING

One reason cited for this is a "fixed charge" of $20,000 a month — $10,000 each to the Senate and House Democratic Campaign Committees. In return for these monthly checks, the two committees have merged their fund-raising activities with those of the national committee.

Also under consideration is setting up a pulse-feeling agency in the national committee.

This proposed polling outfit would supplant the private organizations that have been hired for this work. The President and his political leaders are strong believers in polls and use them constantly. But they had some disconcerting experiences with private pollsters last year.

One was in Kentucky, where Republican Senator Thruston Morton won re-election by a big majority. The administration's pollsters came up with figures showing he would be decisively defeated. They were equally wrong in adjoining Indiana. There the pollsters gave the victory to Republican Senator Homer Capehart, only to have his youthful Democratic opponent, Birch Bayh, win by a good margin.

Attorney General Robert Kennedy, the real backstage ruler of the national ruler committee, favors establishing its own polling organization. The President also is credited as being for that.

The big problem is how much it will cost, and that is now under study.

ALWAYS UNDER FOOT

There is one Washington news photographer who is thoroly fed up "with the Kennedys," and makes no bones about it.

He voiced these indignant feelings after an experience with Senator Ted Kennedy, ambitious 30-year-old brother of the President. The photographer, assigned to cover a dinner for new senators, spotted Wisconsin's new Senator Gaylor Nelson chatting with Louisiana's veteran Senator Russell Long.

The cameraman asked them to pose for a shot. As he was focusing to snap a picture, young Kennedy, who had been standing nearby, strode over and without being asked placed himself between Long and Nelson, with an arm on each so he couldn't be squeezed out.

Angry but unable to do anything about the matter, the photographer irately snapped one picture and then stalked away, remarking loudly:

"That's what I can't stand about these Kennedys. They're always pushing themselves. You can never get away from them. They not only tell you what to do, but how to do it; what profile they want taken, and how many pictures. I'm fed up, but how do you get rid of them?"

POLITICAL:

Attorney General Robert Kennedy is still being needled about that long-standing vacancy on the federal bench in New Mexico. This appointment has gone unfilled for nearly a year, with no explanation from the attorney general, or his brother, the President. The needler is Federal Judge Waldo Rogers, Albuquerque, an Eisenhower appointee. Recently, outspoken Rogers remarked to lawyers in his courtroom, "Don't bother Bobby about the urgent need for another judge in our state. He's too busy arguing the first case of any kind in his life." . . . Representative John Shelley's campaign for mayor of San Francisco this year will be well financed. At a so - called "informal fund - raising luncheon" attended by 30-odd businessmen, more than $120,000 was pledged to finance his race in the fall. Foremost among those present and contributing were George Killion, head of American President Lines, Clarence Heller, stock broker, and Thomas Mellon, former San Francisco police commissioner.

Senator Olin Johnston, D-S.C., chairman of the Post Office Committee, has been advised by his doctor to sell the home he has occupied in the capital for more than 20 years. The physician urged this because greatly increased traffic now passing the house is making Johnson nervous.

William Brawley, former deputy attorney general who lost that job after a policy clash with Postmaster General Day, is leaving the Democratic National Committee. He was shifted there from the Post Office Department, and the inside word is that Brawley is to get another top job in a government agency. He would like to be a Civil Service commissioner, but that is still undecided.

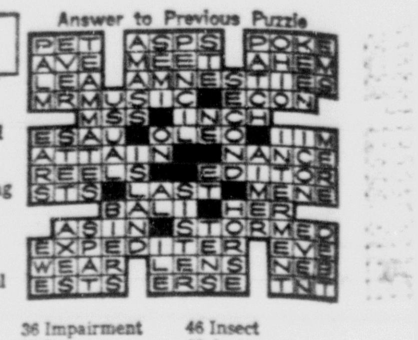
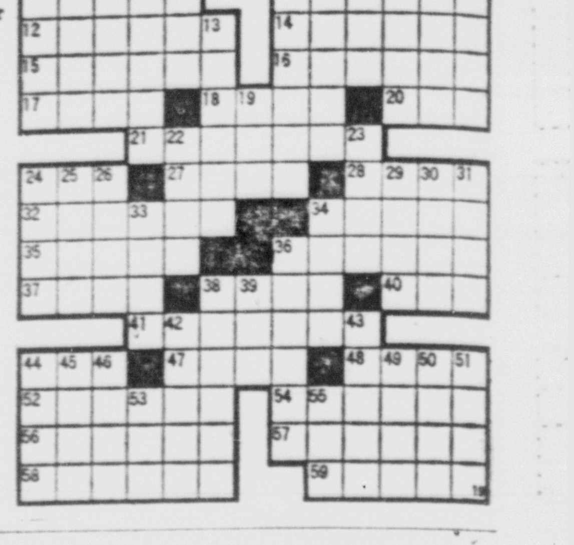
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Bureaucratic Arrogance

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, Ph.D.

Just the other night we heard a city manager of a Southern California city make this statement. It is up to the city to provide emergency ambulance service because the city can provide this service cheaper than can a private ambulance service.

He then went on to explain how ambulance service by the city would cost less because policemen would man the station wagons converted to ambulances. He then went on to talk about the first aid classes for the members of the police force and a few other items, the cost of which had to be paid by the taxpayers and wound up explaining that a charge of $15 per call would be less than $22.50 charged by the private enterprise ambulance service.

What he did not mention was that if the private enterprise concern was exempt from federal, state, county and local taxes and a multitude of governmental controls, regulations and oppressive influences, the private enterprise concern could obviously provide better service for less money.

He did not mention the fact that if the city did not create a monopoly by licensing certain firms to engage in this service business, competition and the normal operation of the market place would provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost.

The city involved purchased a dozen station wagons which were modified to provide a limited ambulance vehicle. The city trained its entire police force in first aid at the expense of the taxpayers. The city manager pretends that a police officer may be an ambulance attendant and a police officer at the same time and handle both jobs adequately. The city-created emergency ambulance service pretends to be concerned with emergency health problems of the population of the city when, in truth, the city is only concerned with increasing the size and the cost and the power of the city government.

What can the taxpayers in this city do about the situation?

In the first place, most of them will be foolish enough to believe that big government can operate on a less costly basis than can private enterprise. They will be entirely satisfied with this deal until something happens to one of them because the station wagons aren't really ambulances or a policeman isn't a trained ambulance attendant.

Others, if they are conscious, can demand the services of a private ambulance or a physician. If they are not conscious, they will be depending upon hope, good luck and a variety of intangibles. They can also move away from government of this kind. They can depend upon their family, those who may pass by at the time of an accident or sudden illness or their own private religious beliefs. They can remember that for maximum security they can depend upon penal institutions and other institutional facilities provided by government.

If a man is ever to be alone for even a minute, he should realize there are times when he must depend upon himself or those who may be close at hand. If a man wants to live in freedom, he should realize he will find it necessary to depend upon himself or those close at hand more frequently than if he is willing to exist in bondage.

We live 25 miles from the closest medical or emergency service. There are quite a few people here who are well over 75 years of age and a few active people who would probably be bedridden if they lived in a heavily populated area. It might take 20 to 25 minutes to get a critically ill person to a hospital or a doctor, but I well remember waiting almost two hours for the police to answer a call when a burglar paid us a visit one early morning and we lived a block and a half from the police station.

Bureaucratic arrogance is more than happy to take over every aspect of your existence. In this manner, bureaucracy grows and prospers.

Good health and good luck to you, in Freedom.

Question Box

Question No. 143: "How could Russia be evicted from the United Nations by merely voting in the General Assembly that the U.S.S.R. seat be declared vacant, when the U.N. Constitution (Charter) reads:

"'The General Assembly can do nothing more than make recommendations and must refer all of its suggestions to the Security Council for action.' (Articles 11-14.)

"This makes the Security Council the only legally binding legislative body in the U.N. and as Russia is one of the five members of the Security Council and has a 'veto,' how could they be evicted?" Signed: Blanche Hays, Huntington Beach.

Answer: We believe Reader Hays has summed up the sections of the Charter in her statement, altho not the exact wording. And under the U.N. Charter, if it were followed, we do not see how a permanent member of the Security Council with veto power, such as Russia, could be expelled.

But in 1950, the United Nations set the procedure to bypass the Charter. The Security Council, in the absence of Russia declared the communist invasion of South Korea a breach of the peace, despite the fact the Charter required concurrence of all permanent members of the Security Council in such actions. The General Assembly ratified this action.

This, according to Dr. V. Orval Watts in "Should We Strengthen the United Nations," had the effect "to transform the United Nations into a possible agency for unlimited government, and to transfer the seat of power from the Security Council to the assembly."

More Diet Emphasis Is Urged by Expert

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agriculture department nutritionist has urged parents, educators and community leaders to get behind local programs designed to impress upon teen-agers the importance of diet.

Dr. Evelyn Spindler of the department's extension service said surveys show that 60 per cent of teen-age girls and 40 per cent of the teen-age boys consume less than two-thirds of the needed nutrients.

She suggested school nutrition talks, tasting parties, teen cookbooks, etiquette courses and nutrition projects to get the proper eating idea across to youngsters.

Improper Clothing Suspends Students

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Forty-five pupils returned to classes at nearby North Hills High School Monday after serving five-day suspensions for what school officials said was improper clothing or hair styles.

E. D. Kruse, supervising principal of North Hills joint schools, reported that four pupils at West View Junior High School and four at Samuel Hamilton Junior High School were given five-day suspensions Monday for the same reasons.

North Hills school authorities last Monday began suspending pupils who, in their opinion, violated the schools' grooming code by wearing tight-fitting skirts or trousers or by having wild hairdos. By the end of the week 71 high school pupils had been suspended.

Union Leader Urges Medics To Clean House

CHICAGO (UPI)—A union leader has challenged the leaders of the medical profession to "clean your own house of unfair practices and unjustifiaby increasing costs."

Joseph F. Burke of Philadelphia warned the doctors, "you will suffer," if this cleanup isn't accomplished.

Burke, president of Local Union No. 19 of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, was one of 300 health insurance experts invited to attend the congress on voluntary health insurance and prepayment sponsored by the American Medical Association (AMA).

Others on the program praised private health insurance and warned that the Kennedy administration will again press for passage of Social Security health care legislation.

Burke said the AMA raises big money to carry on its legislative battles "while the labor movement has but little comparatively."

"We do, however, have the advantage of the fact that there are more of us," he warned.

Burke said the AMA's fight is based on an "erroneous assumption that should the consumer, through governmental agencies, have some control of the economics of medical care it will, eventually, lead to socialized medicine, whatever that really is.

"Our position," he said, "is, essentially, that our people want adequate medical care when needed, that they want to pay for it at reasonable prices, that they desire to have something to say about how it will be provided and paid for, and that the Social Security method is . . . preferable."

Apart from legislative wrangles, Burke said there was "increasing resentment of the people" concerning reports of unfair medical practices and high medical costs. He said politicians may seek to capitalize on this resentment and amplify the situation "far out of proportion."

He indicated that just as a few unsavory persons could destroy the image of labor leaders, so could a few doctors discolor the public attitude toward the medical profession.

"Unless something truly effective is done to clean your own house of unfair practices and unjustifiably increasing costs," Burke told the doctors, "you will suffer as we have and are."

EATING'S COSTLY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Department of Agriculture economists say an analysis of food expenditures for 1962 probably will show that Americans spent four per cent more on food than during 1961.

The reasons: an upgraded diet and use of more marketing services; more people; one per cent higher food prices.

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you want to grow begonias, you'll need a new location that receives indirect sunlight, says the American Society of Florists.

Eye Chart Tests Not Adequate for Reading Skills

If you assume your sight is excellent because you just passed your driver's eye examination, you may have a distorted picture.

You may be equally wrong if you think that Johnny's 20-20 score on the school eye chart means he rates 100 per cent in vision.

The familiar alphabetic eye chart tests used in most motor vehicle examinations and in most schools measure only the person's ability to see a stationery object at a distance.

But your good and safe driving and Johnny's success as a student may well depend on other visual factors.

These include: Peripheral or side vision; depth perception, or judging of space and distance; ability to keep your eyes on a moving target, and maintenance of single clear vision for reasonable lengths of time.

Without good peripheral vision, you may not notice the child darting after a ball from the side of the street. And with faulty close range vision, Johnny may be unable to develop needed reading skills.

Ours is more and more a "near point civilization," according to August Nelson, Executive Secretary for Better Vision Institute. "We have mass reading, television viewing, filing, typing, and close range reading of the telephone book. We need to see at close range of 10 to 20 inches, and at intermediate distances of two to ten feet, as well as at a distance. Only regular professional eye examinations will help safeguard all the visual skills you need."

CHICAGO (UPI)—An estimated 4.9 million babies will be born in the U.S. in 1970, but there will be fewer babies per family, the Population Reference Bureau estimated.

The bureau said a rise in the number of potential mothers offsets a falling fertility rate. The latter dropped from 122.7 births per 1,000 women 15 to 44 years of age in 1957 to 117.3 in 1961.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Do Not Pass Judgment

DEAR ABBY: I helped at a church supper last evening and three other women were there, bustling about, in good health, trying to outwork each other. They "all" have mothers in the local rest home and claim they are unable to care for their mothers in their own homes. Is this Christianity today? Whom are they fooling? Surely not God! Those women nauseate me, and I couldn't partake of their hypocritical offering of food to help the Lord. Help the Lord, indeed! Neglecting their own mothers to go to a church basement and work harder than any cleaning woman. No amount of public slaving will cover up their sins of failing to care for their own mothers. May God forgive them. —OUTRAGED

DEAR OUTRAGED: I cannot know of all the reasons these women do not nurse their own mothers in their own homes. Nor can you. Things are not always as they appear to be. "Judge not—that ye be not judged."

DEAR ABBY: When "Worried Hostess" inquired about how to handle a guest who didn't eat meat I was delighted with your reply. "Pass the fruit and nuts to him." Being a vegetarian of long standing, I have encountered many such worried hostesses. Nature has provided us with plenty of goodies that man can eat and enjoy without eating meat. I know many nice people consider me "nutty," but I keep reminding myself of what Henri Barbusse said. "If someone sees something half an hour before the others can see it, he is 'nuts'—at least for that half hour." Yours truly, —KARL

DEAR ABBY: I didn't mind when this certain person sent out birth announcements for her first baby, and even for her second, but since 1954 she has had seven children and I am getting very tired of her annual birth announcement because it means a present. She is a nice person, Abby, but enough is enough. Should I send her an anonymous complaint? All I can afford is a five-cent stamp. —CAN'T AFFORD HER

DEAR CAN'T: The "anonymous" letter is a coward's weapon. Use the five-cent stamp to send her your congratulations and good wishes.

Faculty Wives Tea to Be Held At Benezet Home

The Colorado College Faculty Wives Club will hold its February tea at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at the home of President Louis T. Benezet.

If you assume your sight is excellent because you just passed your driver's eye examination, you may have a distorted picture.

You may be equally wrong if you think that Johnny's 20-20 score on the school eye chart means he rates 100 per cent in vision.

The familiar alphabetic eye chart tests used in most motor vehicle examinations and in most schools measure only the person's ability to see a stationery object at a distance.

But your good and safe driving and Johnny's success as a student may well depend on other visual factors.

These include: Peripheral or side vision; depth perception, or judging of space and distance; ability to keep your eyes on a moving target, and maintenance of single clear vision for reasonable lengths of time.

Without good peripheral vision, you may not notice the child darting after a ball from the side of the street. And with faulty close range vision, Johnny may be unable to develop needed reading skills.

Ours is more and more a "near point civilization," according to August Nelson, Executive Secretary for Better Vision Institute. "We have mass reading, television viewing, filing, typing, and close range reading of the telephone book. We need to see at close range of 10 to 20 inches, and at intermediate distances of two to ten feet, as well as at a distance. Only regular professional eye examinations will help safeguard all the visual skills you need."

CHICAGO (UPI)—An estimated 4.9 million babies will be born in the U.S. in 1970, but there will be fewer babies per family, the Population Reference Bureau estimated.

The bureau said a rise in the number of potential mothers offsets a falling fertility rate. The latter dropped from 122.7 births per 1,000 women 15 to 44 years of age in 1957 to 117.3 in 1961.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Do Not Pass Judgment

DEAR ABBY: I helped at a church supper last evening and three other women were there, bustling about, in good health, trying to outwork each other. They "all" have mothers in the local rest home and claim they are unable to care for their mothers in their own homes. Is this Christianity today? Whom are they fooling? Surely not God! Those women nauseate me, and I couldn't partake of their hypocritical offering of food to help the Lord. Help the Lord, indeed! Neglecting their own mothers to go to a church basement and work harder than any cleaning woman. No amount of public slaving will cover up their sins of failing to care for their own mothers. May God forgive them. —OUTRAGED

DEAR OUTRAGED: I cannot know of all the reasons these women do not nurse their own mothers in their own homes. Nor can you. Things are not always as they appear to be. "Judge not—that ye be not judged."

DEAR ABBY: When "Worried Hostess" inquired about how to handle a guest who didn't eat meat I was delighted with your reply. "Pass the fruit and nuts to him." Being a vegetarian of long standing, I have encountered many such worried hostesses. Nature has provided us with plenty of goodies that man can eat and enjoy without eating meat. I know many nice people consider me "nutty," but I keep reminding myself of what Henri Barbusse said. "If someone sees something half an hour before the others can see it, he is 'nuts'—at least for that half hour." Yours truly, —KARL

DEAR ABBY: I didn't mind when this certain person sent out birth announcements for her first baby, and even for her second, but since 1954 she has had seven children and I am getting very tired of her annual birth announcement because it means a present. She is a nice person, Abby, but enough is enough. Should I send her an anonymous complaint? All I can afford is a five-cent stamp. —CAN'T AFFORD HER

DEAR CAN'T: The "anonymous" letter is a coward's weapon. Use the five-cent stamp to send her your congratulations and good wishes.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Dear R. R.:

Bless you for asking. So many people have written in with the same problem. Except for plain old ordinary elbow grease, broken fingernails, and a soap - filled scouring pad . . . the only answer I have was suggested by a woman who wrote to say she used ammonia on her hammered aluminum.

She said to take an old wash rag or an old piece of terry cloth bath towel and lay it on the bottom of the hammered aluminum pan or pot. Then pour straight ammonia onto the cloth itself, immediately placing everything in a plastic bag.

The plastic bag keeps the fumes of the ammonia from completely gassing "you"! Also, from the research I have done, I feel that it is the fumes of the ammonia which do the dirty work for you, rather than the liquid doing it.

This idea seems so far fetched that I completely doubted it, but . . . I tried it.

It worked!

I found a friend who had a hammered aluminum Dutch oven and a skillet that were 30 years old and had "never" been cleaned.

This is what I practiced on.

I turned the skillet upside down, placed an old piece of terry cloth bath towel over the skillet, and poured about half a cup of ammonia on it, immediately placed it in the plastic bag and tied the loose ends with a rubber band.

I let this sit overnight.

The next morning I took a soap-filled pad and scrubbed the bottom of this 30-year-old skillet. I couldn't believe it . . . the layers and layers of carbon immediately started coming off! The skillet was shining within five minutes! She was as shocked as I.

If your pot has years of "accumulated" carbon don't think you can do this in one operation. Because, remember . . . if it took years to get "all those layers" of carbon on, you're not about to get it off in five minutes. It may take two operations, even if I did manage to do mine in one operation.

Now ladies, I want to let you know that the directions on the ammonia bottle say, "Do not use ammonia on aluminum. It pits." However, when a pan is 30 years old . . . who cares as long as it gets clean? (It's already got so many pits and scratches on it!)

My friend was delighted with her skillet and her pot. She saw no pits and neither did I, even when we put it under our small dimestore magnifying glass. And just like she said, "Who cares as long as it looks clean!"

You gals might try this, especially if your pan is old and has layers and layers of carbon on it. It worked perfectly for us.—Heloise.

"Never use self-polishing wax on wood floors!"

. . . says Henry M. Tobey, Research Director of the world's largest hardwood floor maker

"Many conscientious housewives may be ruining their beautiful wood floors by using self-polishing wax—but they don't know it—yet! The fact is, most self-polishing waxes are made of synthetic plastics which cannot be removed from wood floors without damaging the finish or the wood.

So the layers of old self-polishing wax pile up until the wood floor becomes darkened and discolored.

The only wood floor care we recommend is Bruce Cleaning Wax or Bruce Floor Cleaner. Both contain a combination of removable liquid paste wax and waterless wood floor cleaner. They clean; remove the old wax; and leave a rich, new coat of paste wax protection—all at the same time!

If you prefer a heavy coat of wax, use Bruce Cleaning Wax. For lighter waxing or badly soiled floors, you'll want Bruce Floor Cleaner. It's the right way to keep wood floors clean and bright."

In recent seasons, the tournament bridge world has witnessed the development of a large crop of highly gifted performers from the younger generation. One of the brightest of these luminaries is Arthur Robinson of Philadelphia who, though he is not yet 30, will be representing the United States in the 1963 World's championship next June in Italy. Partnered by another outstanding "young Philadelphian," Robert Jordan, Robinson qualified for his position on the American team in the trials recently held in Phoenix.

His bridge talent is well founded, for his parents, Dr. and Mrs. L. C. Robinson, are both life masters of the American Contract Bridge league and have been quite active in the eastern circuit for many years.

Today's hand was taken from the previously mentioned Phoenix International trials and features the bidding technique of Robinson and Jordan as they reached a successful slam contract in clubs eluded several of the other contestants.

Robinson, seated North, opened the bidding with one heart and Jordan, South, responded with one spade. North's rebid of two hearts leaves something in reserve, but any stronger action at this point might not be fully warranted.

When South projected the bidding into the three lvel, Robinson reappraised his holding. He had a fit for partner's clubs with controls on the side. Prospects for big things are bright, yet the situation must be handled with delicacy. He temporized with a cue bid of three diamonds and, though South may take this for a natural call, Robinson intended to clarify matters on the next round.

Jordan raised to four diamonds, and North showed his club fit by bidding five clubs. South now realized that the three diamond bid had been a feature showing call and, since he had the tops in clubs as well as spades, he proceeded to six clubs. A trump was led and South was able to take all the tricks by establishing the dummy's heart suit.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — School principal Quincy C. Dickey says teachers shouldn't give homework as punishment.

"Homework," Dickey says, "should serve two primary functions—to develop proficiencies in a particular skill, and to allow the pupil an opportunity to demonstrate this skill to his parents."

"If the weekends and one evening in the middle of the week are left free, the pupil has an opportunity to develop appreciation and skill in art and music and to participate more fully in the social life of the family and the community."

Homework is important to the high school student, especially if he intends to go to college, Dickey adds.

In college, Dickey said, the student will have to spend about 30 hours a week in study—twice the amount of time he'll spend in class.

"If the student isn't used to homework, he'll be lost," he said.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Dear R. R.:

Bless you for asking. So many people have written in with the same problem. Except for plain old ordinary elbow grease, broken fingernails, and a soap - filled scouring pad . . . the only answer I have was suggested by a woman who wrote to say she used ammonia on her hammered aluminum.

She said to take an old wash rag or an old piece of terry cloth bath towel and lay it on the bottom of the hammered aluminum pan or pot. Then pour straight ammonia onto the cloth itself, immediately placing everything in a plastic bag.

The plastic bag keeps the fumes of the ammonia from completely gassing "you"! Also, from the research I have done, I feel that it is the fumes of the ammonia which do the dirty work for you, rather than the liquid doing it.

This idea seems so far fetched that I completely doubted it, but . . . I tried it.

It worked!

I found a friend who had a hammered aluminum Dutch oven and a skillet that were 30 years old and had "never" been cleaned.

This is what I practiced on.

I turned the skillet upside down, placed an old piece of terry cloth bath towel over the skillet, and poured about half a cup of ammonia on it, immediately placed it in the plastic bag and tied the loose ends with a rubber band.

I let this sit overnight.

The next morning I took a soap-filled pad and scrubbed the bottom of this 30-year-old skillet. I couldn't believe it . . . the layers and layers of carbon immediately started coming off! The skillet was shining within five minutes! She was as shocked as I.

If your pot has years of "accumulated" carbon don't think you can do this in one operation. Because, remember . . . if it took years to get "all those layers" of carbon on, you're not about to get it off in five minutes. It may take two operations, even if I did manage to do mine in one operation.

ROBARDS RECORDS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jason Robards Jr., star of Braodway's current "A Thousand Clowns," has put some of his experience as an interpreter of Eugene O'Neill's plays on a Columbia record album. The record consists of his dramatic readings from "Long Day's Journey Into Night," which "The Iceman Cometh," in which he appeared in a record-setting off-Broadway revival; "A Moon for the Misbegotten" and "The Hairy Ape." The latter was written a year before Robards was born in 1922.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—The history of man's efforts to be well shod can be summed up with: "My feet are killing me."

Tha''s the opinion of the Goodyear Women's Service Bureau, which has done an extensive research on footwear over the ages.

Shortly after shoes were invented, the bureau said, fashion entered the picture and comfort—the original goal—was sacrificed.

Cleopatra may have been one of history's most beautiful queens but chances are "her" feet were killing her all the way to the orgy.

The ancient Turks devised a torturous shoe consisting of a wooden slab suspended a foot off the ground by four wooden spikes—sort of a four-way spike heel. This made the Turks taller and, hence, more chic. Also more miserable.

In ancient Greece and Rome, about the only people who had reasonably comfortable feet were the peasants who wrapped their tootsies in soft animal hides or cloth—or went barefoot.

The upper crust of these civilizations wore the flat thongs made from rough leather or rushes woven together in a rather painful pattern. But they put the members of the Caesar set head and shoulders above the peasants, so what mattered if their feet were killing them.

In 14th Century England, the fashionable wore shoes with extremely long toes that had to be tied to the knees with chains.

A century later, brave Venetian ladies wore shoes with 13-inch stilts. This fad spread and, in the 16th Century, nobility all over Europe turned out at big soirees in you-can-be-taller-than-she shoes.

Men who today scoff about milady's ultra-high heels were hobbling about in very similar heels in the days of Louis XIV. They soon gave up the ghost but the Louis XIV heel still is popular with the women.

At the turn of this century, shoes took on a semblance of ease. But it wasn't until about 1920 that fitting techniques were refined enough for shoes to be comfortable. Then the flapper wanted jewel - bedecked contraptions. And we were off again.

Of course, all this doesn't mean comfortable shoes are extinct. The Goodyear women's group, whose parent company makes Neolite shoe products, said most men's shoes are practical and some women's shoes—casual flats and low-heeled pumps—meet the required specifications.

But, pointing to the current creations that raise the heaviest part of the foot about four or five inches off the ground and support it with a spike less than a half-inch in diameter, the Bureau predicted it will be many, many moons, if ever, before fashion's grip is relaxed and women are able to go out on the town in footly comfort.

Harriman May Be Promoted To Higher Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy is considering a State Department shift which would move Averell Harriman up to undersecretary in charge of political affairs.

Harriman, now assistant secretary for Far Eastern affairs, would succeed Undersecretary George C. McGhee, who has asked Kennedy for a foreign assignment. McGhee is expected to get an important ambassadorial post.

The undersecretary for political affairs is No. 3 in the State Department hierarchy, ranking with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Undersecretary George W. Ball as one of the top policymakers.

Authoritative informants said Friday that McGhee had indicated a desire for some time to serve as an ambassador.

The sources said no final decision has been made on his post.

McGhee moved up to his present job in a State Department shakeup Nov. 29, 1961 when then Undersecretary Chester Bowles became the president's special adviser on Asian, African and Latin-American affairs.

Previously McGhee, 51, had been serving as State Department counselor and chairman of the Policy Planning Council.

Before that McGhee, a Texan, was ambassador to Turkey and assistant secretary of state for the Near East, southern Asia and Africa.

Harriman, 71, and a former governor of New York, has been the president's special roving ambassador. He conducted a difficult negotiation at Geneva with 13 other countries, including the Soviet Union, for the neutralization of Laos.

Harrimuan was named to the Far East post in place of Walter C. McConaughy in the 1961 reshuffle. He has since played a leading role in decisions affecting U.S. assistance to India following the Chinese Communist border attack last fall.

Tax Officials Defend Cases Of Settlement

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Tax collectors shudder every time they read in the papers or hear on the air that the government settled a debt with a well-known personality for, say, 20 cents on the dollar.

From experience they know losers in past disputes with Uncle Sam will write letters demanding to know why this big shot got off for one-fifth when they had to pay something like one-half.

Angry taxpayers will stand up at meetings, denounce the government for compromising with wrongdoers and ask if honesty really pays.

Lawyers at the Internal Revenue Service insist there was no surrender. What really happend, they say, was that the government finally ascertained and accepted all it could expect if the case went through court.

"It is a false impression that we are giving away something and not getting all we are entitled to," says Rudy P. Hertzog, associate chief counsel at IRS.

"Who the taxpayer is, whether he is prominent or unknown, has absolutely nothing to do with it," puts in Leo Bardenheuer, assistant director of the appellate division.

Then why is there frequently such a difference between the amount the government asserts an individual owes in back taxes and penalties and the amount it eventually accepts?

Hertzog says its mainly because in this kind of dispute IRS is unable to obtain sufficient data to derve an accurate figure. Sometimes it may result from a court decision modifying the law. But primarily, Hertzog contends, it's because available records are incomplete and the taxpayer or his attorney is unwilling until the case reaches the court stage to make a full disclosure.

Two Washington attorneys who are always on the other side in tax contests find themselves generally supporting the government's case. One says it puts an "unfair slant" on the tax collector's job to complain that he settled for so much on the dollar.

Occasionally, this lawyer says, he has felt IRS entered some items in its bill "for trading purposes." He also expresses doubt the government suffers seriously from lack of information except in fraud cases.

The other attorney—both asked to remain anonymous—said most difficulties arise from agents in district offices, particularly for the little guy who is unaware he has rights of appeal. In this lawyer's opinion, "The government is much tougher on the big shot than on the little people."

"Part of the difficulty," Bardenheuer says, "is the general impression that we have already determined on the basis of full information how much an individual owes and take less than we had determined. In fact, we make a determination as to how much he may owe. What is determined in the settlement is how much he does owe."

Just this week the government settled an initial claim of about $315,000 against former Gov. Earle C. Clements of Kentucky for some $62,000 plus interest.

IRS says that or lack of records, the government was unsure in which year certain items were taxable so played safe by assigning them to more than one year. When the right years were established, a duplication of more than $93,000 was eliminated. Furthermore, IRS relates, conclusion that fraud could not be proved resulted in dropping claims for another $146,000 in penalties and back taxes.

The government's settlement with big time gambler Frank Erickson raised a big fuss several years ago. IRS records show Erickson was assessed for $5.53 million, settled for $1.83 million.

In this kind of case, Hertzog says, the government gets less than usual cooperation and must pose a larger than usual deficiency against the taxpayer.

IRS attorneys point to files indicating they have many more problems on a lesser scale. Uncertainty over some bank deposits led to a $9,687 assessment against a West Virginia couple. When records were produced, the government settled for $98. In Corpus Christi, Tex., a $3,405 case was settled without any payment when later evidence substantiated charitable contributions.

All these are settlements of disputed tax liability. In a different type of case, the government will compromise for a smaller amount when liability is undisputed if, Hertzog says, "This is all we can reasonably hope to collect in the foreseeable future."

ROBARDS RECORDS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jason Robards Jr., star of Braodway's current "A Thousand Clowns," has put some of his experience as an interpreter of Eugene O'Neill's plays on a Columbia record album. The record consists of his dramatic readings from "Long Day's Journey Into Night," which "The Iceman Cometh," in which he appeared in a record-setting off-Broadway revival: "A Moon for the Misbegotten" and "The Hairy Ape." The latter was written a year before Robards was born in 1922.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

DOES SALT RAISE BLOOD PRESSURE?

Salt, which is essential to life, is found in almost every food except rice and fruit. The normal individual is not harmed by an added pinch in cooking and may relish an additional sprinkling on his food at mealtime. But some people, such as victims of hypertension or dropsy, are better off without salt. Research along this line also suggests that those with a family history of hypertension ought to restrict their intake.

Does salt cause high blood pressure? Probably not, but it may bring on or aggravate the condition in potential hypertensives. We know the disorder runs in families and some of these men and women may inherit a characteristic that makes them sensitive to salt.

This was demonstrated recently by Dr. Lewis K. Dahl, of the Brookhaven laboratory on Long Island. He fed excessive amounts of salt to rats and many developed high blood pressure within a short time; it was so severe in some of the animals, they did not survive. Others tolerated the ordeal as though nothing had happened. In two out of three rats, blood pressure returned to normal when salt was removed from the diet.

Since some of the rodents were not affected by salt, Dr. Dahl decided it might be a hereditary trait. He selected several pairs of the salt resistant rats for breeding purposes and compared their offspring with an equal number that had high readings when fed salt. In time, through selective breeding, he was able to develop a strain of rats that were not affected by salt.

These experiments are meaningful for humans. In all probability, many of us have an inborn resistance to salt and are destined to escape hypertension. There are tests that can be done early in life to determine the potential candidate for hypertension. Those who fall into this category or who have a family history of hypertension should go easy on salt.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Tomorrow: New antibiotics.

Pap Test

A. B. writes: Does the Pap test show only that cancer is present? Or can it detect cancer cells in the making?

Reply

In cancer, there has to be a moment in which a normal cell turns malignant. The Pap test is good but I doubt if it could catch this exact moment of change. On the other hand the test detects cells with certain characteristics that are potentially malignant and in this respect the answer to your second question is yes.

Sigmoid Exam

An anesthetic is not needed and the procedure can be done in the physician's office or at the hospital.

Reply

U.S. Opposed to Subsidies For Production of Gold

By GEORGE WEEKS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States for more than a quarter of a century has bought and sold gold at $35 an ounce.

The Kennedy Administration has again reaffirmed its intention to hold to that price despite renewed pressure from the domestic industry for a subsidy, and continuing demands by foreign producers for an increase in the basic price.

The U.S. position is "to oppose any proposals that would lead anyone to believe we do not think the $35 price is the proper price for gold."

Why this firm adherence to $35?

Because, according to the U.S. Treasury, tampering with the price would raise the risk of disrupting the monetary system "which is so vital to the U.S. economy and the economy of the Free World."

The administration's stand was spelled out in blunt terms to the domestic industry last week before the National Western Mining Conference in Denver.

Leland Howard, director of the U.S. office of domestic gold and silver operations, said gold must be considered from the standpoint of the national interest as a whole. And, in arguing against subsidies, he said:

"Any effort to assist a relative few people to keep or obtain jobs, no matter how desirable, would, instead of helping those in the gold industry, run the grave risk of disrupting the monetary system on which not only their own livelihood but the livelihood of all of us depends."

Howard acknowledged that gold production in the United States has been on the wane "while Free World production has been waxing strong."

U.S. production was only 4.5 per cent of free world production in 1961, dropping from $65 million in 1955 to $55 in 1961, while South Africa's production was increasing from $510 million to $803 million.

Rhodesian and Ghanaian production also increased, while Mexico's declined and Australia's held about even.

The U.S. dollar has become a "kingpin" of international financial stability, Howard said.

A fundamental reason for this has been the U.S. policy of buying and selling gold at a fixed price to foreign governments, central banks and others for settlement of international balances.

"Other governments hold the dollar because of our policy of buying and selling gold at a fixed price," Howard said. "The dollar is the only currency that maintains this link between money and gold, and the monetary system of the entire free world is hinged to this inconvertibility which we maintain between gold and dollars at a fixed price."

But what has this got to do with subsidies? After all, gold is subsidized in other countries, and agriculture and other industries are subsidized in the United States.

"The answer is," Howard said, "that the monetary units of other countries do not have the status of the dollar, and other countries do not have the responsibility for maintaining a fixed relationship between their currencies and gold.

"Gold in the United States is a monetary metal and cannot be treated as a commodity, as are products of other industries, or as gold is treated in some countries."

Proposals now before Congress would establish a $105-an-ounce price for gold to be used in the domestic market for such items as dental fillings. Gold sold for monetary use would remain at $35.

But the treasury fears that even a price revision limited to industrial uses would encourage speculation for a higher price in the monetary uses.

"We cannot take side excursions in gold that others will interpret as a sign we do not think the present price for gold is correct," Howard said.

The treasury contends that this is an international as well as a domestic issue.

"We must think of the dollar not only as involved in our domestic economy, but as a reserve currency held by others as a supplement to the world's gold supply," Howard said. "The dollar has attained this position internationally for a number of reasons.

"But one essential aspect of maintaining confidence in the dollar and maintaining a strong and stable international monetary system is to continue to stand ready to buy and sell gold at the fixed price of $35 an ounce and to avoid any actions that would encourage speculation for a higher price of gold."

The treasury is hyper-sensitive about any action that might lead to international speculation on the price of gold.

It fears that any price other than the official $35 would be construed by creditors—those countries holding dollar balances—to mean that the United States had decided the official price is too low; that in some way, directly or indirectly, the U.S. was on the way to revising the official price.

President Kennedy maintained during the first two years of his administration that the United States was not on the way to revising the official price.

Earlier this week, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., asked for a treasury assessment of reports that France has been encouraging other countries to increase their demands on U.S. gold reserves. He released the text of a letter to Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon asking him to comment on the reports. The letter said, in part:

"There have been in the news recently reports that the French government is acquiring American obligations for which it could demand payment in gold. One report fixed the amount already in the hands of the French government at more than $1 billion.

"Another related report has been to the effect that the French are seeking to encourage European banking houses and others holding U.S. assets to demand payment for them in gold.

"I would appreciate your assessment of these reports. To what extent do you think they are true, and to what extent could they threaten our financial stability?"

The technique of carrying out U.S. gold policy may vary under different administrations.

But the basic policy of centralizing the U.S. gold reserves in the hands of the government and maintaining a fixed price of $35 an ounce has held for 29 years.

And it appears that Kennedy is determined to continue it for at least another year.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

(© 1963: By the Chicago Tribune)

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

DOES SALT RAISE BLOOD PRESSURE?

Salt, which is essential to life, is found in almost every food except rice and fruit. The normal individual is not harmed by an added pinch in cooking and may relish an additional sprinkling on his food at mealtime. But some people, such as victims of hypertension or dropsy, are better off without salt. Research along this line also suggests that those with a family history of hypertension ought to restrict their intake.

Does salt cause high blood pressure? Probably not, but it may bring on or aggravate the condition in potential hypertensives. We know the disorder runs in families and some of these men and women may inherit a characteristic that makes them sensitive to salt.

This was demonstrated recently by Dr. Lewis K. Dahl, of the Brookhaven laboratory on Long Island. He fed excessive amounts of salt to rats and many developed high blood pressure within a short time; it was so severe in some of the animals, they did not survive. Others tolerated the ordeal as though nothing had happened. In two out of three rats, blood pressure returned to normal when salt was removed from the diet.

Since some of the rodents were not affected by salt, Dr. Dahl decided it might be a hereditary trait. He selected several pairs of the salt resistant rats for breeding purposes and compared their offspring with an equal number that had high readings when fed salt. In time, through selective breeding, he was able to develop a strain of rats that were not affected by salt.

These experiments are meaningful for humans. In all probability, many of us have an inborn resistance to salt and are destined to escape hypertension. There are tests that can be done early in life to determine the potential candidate for hypertension. Those who fall into this category or who have a family history of hypertension should go easy on salt.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Tomorrow: New antibiotics.

Pap Test

A. B. writes: Does the Pap test show only that cancer is present? Or can it detect cancer cells in the making?

Reply

In cancer, there has to be a moment in which a normal cell turns malignant. The Pap test is good but I doubt if it could catch this exact moment of change. On the other hand the test detects cells with certain characteristics that are potentially malignant and in this respect the answer to your second question is yes.

Sigmoid Exam

J. L. writes: Is a sigmoidoscopic examination an office procedure or is it done in the hospital under an anesthetic?

Reply

An anesthetic is not needed and the procedure can be done in the physician's office or at the hospital.

F. R. writes: Are arthritic spurs caused by muscle spasms?

Reply

U.S. Opposed to Subsidies For Production of Gold

By GEORGE WEEKS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States for more than a quarter of a century has bought and sold gold at $35 an ounce.

The Kennedy Administration has again reaffirmed its intention to hold to that price despite renewed pressure from the domestic industry for a subsidy, and continuing demands by foreign producers for an increase in the basic price.

The U.S. position is "to oppose any proposals that would lead anyone to believe we do not think the $35 price is the proper price for gold."

Why this firm adherence to $35?

Because, according to the U.S. Treasury, tampering with the price would raise the risk of disrupting the monetary system "which is so vital to the U.S. economy and the economy of the Free World."

The administration's stand was spelled out in blunt terms to the domestic industry last week before the National Western Mining Conference in Denver.

Leland Howard, director of the U.S. office of domestic gold and silver operations, said gold must be considered from the standpoint of the national interest as a whole. And, in arguing against subsidies, he said:

"Any effort to assist a relative few people to keep or obtain jobs, no matter how desirable, would, instead of helping those in the gold industry, run the grave risk of disrupting the monetary system on which not only their own livelihood but the livelihood of all of us depends."

Howard acknowledged that gold production in the United States has been on the wane "while Free World production has been waxing strong."

U.S. production was only 4.5 per cent of free world production in 1961, dropping from $65 million in 1955 to $55 in 1961, while South Africa's production was increasing from $510 million to $803 million.

Rhodesian and Ghanaian production also increased, while Mexico's declined and Australia's held about even.

The U.S. dollar has become a "kingpin" of international financial stability, Howard said.

A fundamental reason for this has been the U.S. policy of buying and selling gold at a fixed price to foreign governments, central banks and others for settlement of international balances.

"Other governments hold the dollar because of our policy of buying and selling gold at a fixed price," Howard said. "The dollar is the only currency that maintains this link between money and gold, and the monetary system of the entire free world is hinged to this inconvertibility which we maintain between gold and dollars at a fixed price."

But what has this got to do with subsidies? After all, gold is subsidized in other countries, and agriculture and other industries are subsidized in the United States.

"The answer is," Howard said, "that the monetary units of other countries do not have the status of the dollar, and other countries do not have the responsibility for maintaining a fixed relationship between their currencies and gold.

"Gold in the United States is a monetary metal and cannot be treated as a commodity, as are products of other industries, or as gold is treated in some countries."

Proposals now before Congress would establish a $105-an-ounce price for gold to be used in the domestic market for such items as dental fillings. Gold sold for monetary use would remain at $35.

But the treasury fears that even a price revision limited to industrial uses would encourage speculation for a higher price in the monetary uses.

"We cannot take side excursions in gold that others will interpret as a sign we do not think the present price for gold is correct," Howard said.

The treasury contends that this is an international as well as a domestic issue.

"We must think of the dollar not only as involved in our domestic economy, but as a reserve currency held by others as a supplement to the world's gold supply," Howard said. "The dollar has attained this position internationally for a number of reasons.

"But one essential aspect of maintaining confidence in the dollar and maintaining a strong and stable international monetary system is to continue to stand ready to buy and sell gold at the fixed price of $35 an ounce and to avoid any actions that would encourage speculation for a higher price of gold."

The treasury is hyper-sensitive about any action that might lead to international speculation on the price of gold.

It fears that any price other than the official $35 would be construed by creditors—those countries holding dollar balances—to mean that the United States had decided the official price is too low; that in some way, directly or indirectly, the U.S. was on the way to revising the official price.

President Kennedy maintained during the first two years of his administration that the United States was not on the way to revising the official price.

Earlier this week, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., asked for a treasury assessment of reports that France has been encouraging other countries to increase their demands on U.S. gold reserves. He released the text of a letter to Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon asking him to comment on the reports. The letter said, in part:

"There have been in the news recently reports that the French government is acquiring American obligations for which it could demand payment in gold. One report fixed the amount already in the hands of the French government at more than $1 billion.

"Another related report has been to the effect that the French are seeking to encourage European banking houses and others holding U.S. assets to demand payment for them in gold.

"I would appreciate your assessment of these reports. To what extent do you think they are true, and to what extent could they threaten our financial stability?"

The technique of carrying out U.S. gold policy may vary under different administrations.

But the basic policy of centralizing the U.S. gold reserves in the hands of the government and maintaining a fixed price of $35 an ounce has held for 29 years.

And it appears that Kennedy is determined to continue it for at least another year.

LONDON — A British village with a population of 351 is claiming it is the only town in the world without gossips.

Seven-year-old Roger Woodward was swept over the Horseshoe Falls on the Canadian side on July 9, 1950. He was rescued by a sightseeing boat that negotiates the waters below the falls. He is the only person in recorded history to survive such a plunge.

Factory Work Week Discloses Slight Dip

WASHINGTON (AP)—The factory work week dipped 0.4 hours during January, to 40.1 hours, the Labor Department said here. It was the second successive month of decline.

The drop for January was described as slightly more than seasonal, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics said there would be reason for concern if there is a continued drop in February.

However, the January work week compares with one of 39.7 hours in January 1962.

Along with the dip in the work week, average weekly earnings dropped about $1, from $98.42 in December to $97.44 in January. Weekly earnings for the previous January were $94.88.

German Women Still Haunted, Parisienne Says

By ROSETTE HARGORVE

BONN (NEA) — I can't speak as a man, but I can speak as a woman who has lived in France most of her life . . . Sex appeal in this West German capital city —as in most of Germany—is an unknown quantity.

The generation of women now on the threshold of middleage, who were brought up under Hitler, still seem to be haunted by his rantings against vanity and fleshpots.

The neurotic Nazi's exaltation of the well-scrubbed, healthy German woman can be traced in the present-day ruddy faces, shiny noses and absence of lipstick. They resolutely push aside anything which touches on charm, chic or cheerfulness.

All this is made more evident by the hundred and one temptations which surround German women today. Stores, even in a provincial university town such as this temporary "capital," dispaly a diversity of style which, under a flourishing economy, places them within reach of their purses.

On the other hand, if and when a middle-class German woman gives free rein to fancy and extravagance, the result is an ogry of flounces, lace, sequins and brocades.

While Munich, West Berlin and Dusseldorf parties and dances will find young girls dressed in the current Paris fashions, Bonn is fairly typical of the whole country. Its population is made up of solid but drab burghers, professors, politicians, officials and retired people—alongside a large diplomatic corps which provides birds and dazzling plumage that stand out like parakeets among sparrows and starlings.

What immediately strikes the newcomer are the hats. "They never change," said a critical foreigner, "save in media. In summer they are in straw and in winter they are leather, fur or felt."

Sunday church service brings this German millinery out in full flush. The women's black derby, which this winter has been adopted with enthusiasm, shares honors with variations on the theme of the hunting cap, the homburg or the tribly, with or without feathers or gold braid.

Most German women are still shy of Paris innovations, but department stores are beginning to stock French and Italian models.

The manager of a large ready-to-wear store in Bonn insisted that price is not the trouble. "Paris fashions do not cause much of a flutter. Clients seek mostly good quality and finish. And they are convinced that this is only to be found in German goods."

What the average German woman shops for is an all-purpose number, a saleswoman in one of the new "boutiques" pointed out. "Something she can wear for a luncheon date, also for informal evening wear. Even more important, it must last at least five if not 10 years."

Again, there is no struggling on the part of the woman in her 40s here to retain a youthful silhouette. She prefers to indulge in cakes and whipped cream.

The greatest surprise, in a country known to produce the best dyestuffs in the world, is the German woman's appalling color sense. When she is rash, she concocts howling combinations but usually settles for mousy grays and drab beiges which can be worn the year round.

The younger generations, however, are way ahead in the game. They enthusiastically adopted the towering bee-hive haridos, pointed toes and stiletto heels and skin-tight slacks. Also, they use make-up with a lavish hand.

They watch their weight and count their calories. But they have a long way to go before they achieve the sophistication of the average American secretary.

Adjustable FHA Loan Rates Are Being Proposed

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A presidential committee headed by Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon recommended here scrapping legally fixed maximum interest rates on government-backed home loans.

In a 64-page report to President Kennedy, the group urged that the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration be given reasonably broad authority to set and adjust maximum rates on FHA and VA mortgages.

At present, the maximum rate on FHA mortgages, including an insurance premium, is 5¾ per cent. The rate on the VA GI mortgages is 5¼ per cent.

The recommendation, if approved by the administration and Congress, presumably would be the most far-reaching of all proposals made by the Dillon Committee. The impact would be great inasmuch as FHA and VA programs account for nearly 90 per cent of all loans guaranteed or insured under various federal programs.

Any change in maximum interest charges would not be retroactive. Only future mortgage loans would be affected.

Kennedy appointed the four-man committee last March, ordering a thorough search for guidelines and priorities to be applied to almost all federal lending programs.

In arguing for the elimination of fixed interest rates on FHA and VA loans, the committee said more flexible arrangements would make rates more responsive to changing credit conditions.

Serving with Dillon on the committee were Chairman Walter W. Heller of the Council of Economic Advisers, Chairman William McChesney Martin of the Federal Reserve Board, and David E. Bell, former budget director and now foreign aid administrator.

A HIGH PERCENTAGE

GENEVA (UPI) — Up to 30 per cent of the world's population suffers from mental disorders, according to Alexander Leighton, professor of social psychiatry and anthropology at Cornell Unversity.

Leighton told a special session of the United Nations science and technology conference here Thursday that economic growth is retarded because 15 to 30 per cent of the world's people suffer from mental disorders.

Deficit Shadow Moves Across Rocky's Image

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A dark shadow is moving across the bright political image of New York's Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. It is moving, which is the governor's good fortune. If the shadow comes to rest it could take on the outlines of Poe's bad-luck raven.

The shadow consists of Rockefeller's spending record. Conservative Republicans will not be happy about that and less so if, as suspected by some conservatives, Rockefeller comes up this time with a deficit.

The governor campaigned last year and was elected to a second term on a solemn pledge that he would not raise taxes. He further assured the voters that he would not resort to bond issues in lieu of a tax hike. Neither would he draw on reserves of state funds to meet expenses.

Pay-as-you-go was the bugle note of Rockefeller's campaign. Heavily taxed New Yorkers liked the idea, especially the pledge of no new taxes. Rockefeller had not much more than dummy opposition from the Democrats and their nominee for governor.

But when the returns were in, Rocky had a bulge of no more than 500,000 votes. He and his managers had figured on more than that, a whopping majority would have becalmed Republican opposition to Rockefeller's nomination next year for president. His majority was disappointing.

Even so, Rockefeller's re-election, Richard M. Nixon's defeat in California and some lesser factors zoomed the New Yorker to front runner position toward 1964. Not merely front runner, either, but front runner by several laps. Then Rockefeller produced his budget for the state of New York. The voters' anguish was loud and immediate.

Rocky did not propose new taxes. But he laid on a 40 per cent hike in motor vehicle registration fees. License fees for physicians, pool halls and such also went up. The average increase on a New York motor vehicle was $9.50.

Rockefeller explains that these revenue measures are in the area of fees, not taxes. This exercise in semantics verges on a quibble. But Rockefeller has on his side the solid argument that registration fees have not been increased since 1923—and what can you buy now that doesn't cost more than 40 years ago?

The Republican legislature is shaken. The voters are pressuring their legislators to reject Rocky's program. That would be a political reverse of magnitude for the governor. Worse for him, however, is that the uproar over fees has focused attention on his spending record and spending plans.

Conservatives who have been applauding Rockefeller as a fiscal conservative may want to take another look. He is, in fact, a big time spender in the Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy tradition.

Hunters in Ohio rarely found bears and wolves there after 1825.

Factory Work Week Discloses Slight Dip

WASHINGTON (AP)—The factory work week dipped 0.4 hours during January, to 40.1 hours, the Labor Department said here. It was the second successive month of decline.

The drop for January was described as slightly more than seasonal, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics said there would be reason for concern if there is a continued drop in February.

However, the January work week compares with one of 39.7 hours in January 1962.

Along with the dip in the work week, average weekly earnings dropped about $1, from $98.42 in December to $97.44 in January. Weekly earnings for the previous January were $94.88.

Dr. Freed Introduces Terms In First Seminar Session

A review of psychology's terminology for behavior patterns introduced the first session of a six - part seminar on "The Psychology of Political and Religious Choice" Monday night in Palmer Hall at Colorado College.

Dr. Dougas W. Freed, associate professor of psychology at the college, is conducting the sessions, a part of CC's Continuing Education Seminar.

Defense mechanisms, made consciously or subconsciously to satisfy desires and dictates of the individual's conscience, were defined by Dr. Freed and aligned with some examples in political and religious behavior. They include:

Repression — a situation where an individual refuses to be aware of a fact because painful associations prevent recall. Some institutional religions, Dr. Freed said, refuse to recognize that evil exists.

Regression - fixation — a condition where the individual is "stuck" on a certain idea. Applied to a political example, regression - fixation could explain the reliance by the German populace on authority of the Nazis after unfortunate experiences with a republican government.

Rationalization — an excuse to the individual as well as to others which provides a substitute reason or motive for the real motive.

Reaction formation —a condition where the individual fights feelings within himself by taking extreme action against these feelings. An example given by Dr. Freed was the cause of Elmer Gantry, who fought sin because he feared it in himself.

Projection — attributing one's own motives to somebody else's. It is most commonly found, politically, in feelings of hatred as in the case of White Southerners against the Negroes.

Displacement (displaced aggression) — taking out one's feelings against a substitute for the real motivator. Politically, subjects under a totalitarian system fear to object to armed leaders for fear of retaliation.

Compensation — finding satisfactions in one way when satisfaction is lacking in another attempt. Politically, an example of this behavior is seen in the SA Brown Shirts in Germany in the 1930s when an excuse was found for hoodlum - ism not otherwise tolerated.

Intellectualization — looking at individual problems on an advanced intellectual level.

Attention getting — extreme positions which make an individua's actions more acceptable to him. Extreme positions, politically, include actions by the Minutemen and Black Muslims.

Dr. Freed noted two motives not related to personality which account for some religious and political choices: convention (conformity), and direct material advantage.

Convention, which operates on approval and disapproval, is a powerful influence on religious choice and "is true where people don't particularly care to adopt an unpopular position. Convention also accounts for those not intensely interested in religion and politics," Dr. Freed noted.

The seminar, attended by some 20 adults, will delve Thursday night into points included in Eric Hoffer's "The True Believer." Future seminars will meet on Feb. 25, March 4, 7 and 11.

13,000 Catalogs Being Mailed by CC to Students

Some 13,000 copies of the 1963 Colorado College summer session catalog will be distributed this week to students in all 50 states.

Fred A. Sondermann, director of the summer session, announced publication of the attractive 28-page book, which lists more than 130 courses in 23 academic departments at the independent college of arts and sciences.

A line drawing of historic Cutler Hall against a lime-green background enlivens the front cover. The back cover contains a campus map.

"This is the most complete catalog in Colorado College summer session history," said Dr. Sondermann. "A new feature this year is that we have included detailed biographical sketches of visiting faculty members.

"We are proud of the number of distinguished visitors who will join our summer faculty, and we are giving prospective students an opportunity to see the quality of our program," he said.

The catalogs are being mailed to Colorado Springs area high school graduates of 1961 and 1962 who are enrolled in colleges and universities, as well as to all 1963 graduates, as a service to those Pikes Peak region students wishing to advance their academic careers during the summer months.

Dr. Sondermann said the catalogs will be available to anyone who desires to receive one. Inquiries should be addressed to him at the Colorado College summer session office, in Colorado Springs.

Bonds Forfeited On Five Who Fail to Appear

Judge Allan Asher ordered $125 in bonds forfeited Monday when five persons failed to appear in Municipal Court.

Forfeiting $25 bonds each on drunk charges were Dean Anderson, 29, 320 Terrace Place, Manitou Springs; Ethel Adams, 37, 424 N. Corona; Adolph Aragon, 55, 912 S. Conejo, and Edward Bradford, 45, 329 E. Cimarron.

Forfeiting a $25 bond on a charge of riotous conduct was Alfredo Blan, 824 S. Royer.

A warrant was ordered issued for the arrest of Elaine Fontenot, 26, 414 S. Cascade Ave., who failed to appear to answer to charges of disorderly and riotous conduct. Her bond was set for $25.

Judge Asher also ordered a warrant be issued for the arrest of Raymond Bocell, 32, Athens, Texas, charged with driving in a restricted zone. Bocell's bond was set at $5.

Three wives who had initiated complaints against their husbands asked the judge to dismiss the charges. Judge Asher agreed and dismissed a drunk charge against Herman Morris, 39, 838 E. Willamette; riotous conduct and drunk charges against Howard Carroll, 30, 412 N. Franklin, and riotous conduct and breach of peace charges against Alfred Herrera, 22, 15½ W. Costilla.

Willie Wilson, 34, Savoy Hotel, and Rose Wilson, 31, 320 Mesa Rd., had signed counter complaints of riotous conduct and breach of peace against each other. Both told Judge Asher they wanted the charges dropped.

The judge continued the cases until March 18, telling the pair the charges would be dropped if there was no further trouble between them for the next 30 days.

Two Springs Youths Fined $100 Each for Drag Racing

The youths, Roger Reinke, 1308 N. Walnut St., and James Wichman, 2401 W. Willamette, also pleaded guilty to charges of speeding and reckless driving.

Judge Asher told Reinke and Wichman half of the fines would be suspended on there being no further violation of a moving nature in one year's time and suspended their right to drive in Colorado Springs for 15 days.

Two other youths, Dennis Webster, 19, 2312 W. Pikes Peak Ave., and David Kemppainen, 19, Ft. Carson, also pleaded guilty to charges of drag racing but their cases were continued until March 7 for sentencing.

Charles Wilson, charged with riotous conduct and drunkenness, had his case continued until March 12 for taking testimony. He pleaded not guilty to the former charge and guilty to the latter.

Judge Asher levied fines as follows on persons who entered guilty pleas to charges: Lavina Parkison, 26, 444 Glenview Ct., unattended vehicle, $25 ($15 suspended on there being no violation of a moving nature in a 90-day period).

Louis Spangler, 1503 E. Caramillo, signal light, $5, speeding, $15; William Anderson, 2513 W. Pikes Peak, riotous conduct, $15; Joe Grenninger, 41, 3109 W. Colorado Ave., riotous conduct and drunkenness, $25; Robert Kersanty, 23, Air Force Academy, careless driving, $35; Robert Innes, 19, Slocum Hall, Colorado College, careless driving, $20, injury to city property, $15, with a 10-day stay of execution.

James Kennis, 30, 425 N. El Paso, drunk, $25; Everett Brady, 24, Ft. Carson, drunk, $25; Francisco Chavez, 25, 405 Mesa Rd., drunk, $20, committing a nuisance, $20 (half of the fine was suspended on there being no repetition of Chavez' conduct in the future).

Leroy Donald, 19, 624 E. Maple, trespassing on private property, $20; Manuel Delgado, 21, 15 W. Costilla, injury to private property, $15, suspend on there being no further violation of a similar nature.

Esequel Rodriguez, 37, 712 S. Sahwatch, and Arcenio DeHerrera, 34, 828 N. Pine St., pleaded guilty to drunk charges and were given 10 days in city jail. Edward Harper, 58, of Denver, also pleaded guilty to drunkenness and was given a 30-day jail sentence. Judge Asher told Harper he could serve five days if he would return to Denver.

Two Added To Defendant List in Suit

Elmer W. Lumberg of the First National Bank of Denver and Ben Wendelken, attorney for the Broadmoor Hotel were added Monday to the list of defendants in the 130,000 damage suit alleging false arrest brought by Jewett Bennett against Broadmoor Hotel Inc., Roy Harvey, Sol Cohen and the First National Bank of Denver.

The plaintiff who is represented by Denver attorney Truman E. Cole, claims she was falsely arrested, suffered false imprisonment, malicious prosecution and defamation of character and has requested a jury trial.

The action arises from a May 12, 1961 incident when she gave a $25 check to the Broadmoor Hotel. She was arrested May 29 and charged with passing a no account check.

It is claimed Miss Bennett did have an account with the First National Bank of Denver at that time. It is also said that the plaintiff earned her livelihood in the public relations field and as a result of the false arrest and resulting publicity she suffered loss of large sums of money in earnings and profit and earning capacity and that her credit was severely impaired.

The complaint also says "great humiliation, shame, disgrace and mental anguish" ensued.

Senior Citizen Problems Need Study Speaker States

Problems of persons over 65 deserve a continuing scientific study to reach an adequate solution, Mrs. Harvey Carter of the Colorado College sociology department said here Monday.

Mrs. Carter told persons attending the first noon luncheon meeting in the Senior Seminar — 1963 program that detailed analysis and surveys of problems relating to "senior citizens" would result in a clearer understanding and evaluation.

The speaker was among three panel members who spoke on, "Our Seniors — Problem or Potential?" in a meeting at the Green Room of the Antlers Hotel. Panel moderator was Dr. Van S. Shaw, head of the CC sociology department.

G. W. Feldhauser, director of the Social Security Administration in the Colorado Springs area, told the group that the city does not have an abnormally large percentage of citizens over age 65.

"From 1950 to 1960 the percentage of persons living in Colorado Springs who are over age 65 has dropped 3.4 per cent. This compares with a 3 per cent increase for the same period in the state and a 1.1 per cent increase in the nation," he said.

El Paso County has 15,054 persons who are over age 60, and of this number 6,281 persons continue to work without compensation from old age pensions or social security, Feldhauser said.

He quoted figures to show that 5,918 persons in this group have social security; 1,076 have both social security and old age pension; 1,779 have old age pension only; 8,773 have benefits from both these programs.

"People retiring today depend on 50 cents from each $1 of public funds, and four out of five persons of retirement age benefit from public fund programs. Tho total income for these persons averages only $900 per year from public fund programs, the amount has doubled in the past 10 years," he said.

The third panel member at the luncheon was A. Earl Bryson, president of the Senior League of the Pikes Peak Region, an organization assisting in the Senior Seminars series.

Bryson said that the maturity and acquire wisdom of older people are "a newly released and relatively untapped reservoir of reserve strength."

These reserves, Bryson said, should be used to meet" a continuing crisis that calls for the best contributions of all ages to preserve our unique character as a people and nation."

Quoting from a Michigan legislative advisory council on problems of the aging, Bryson said, "Attitudes toward the aged are a critically important factor in determining the nature and magnitude of the task facing gerentological organizations. If the community regards elderly people as basically incapable of solving their own problems, they will tend to become, in fact, less capable and more dependent.

"Given a negative orientation toward the aged, it is clear that the community must expect to provide a vast amount of aid and assistance.

"If, on the other hand, it is recognized that the great majority of those over 65 are capable of taking care of their own needs, and that many of the most creative, productive and powerful persons in any community are themselves, "older people," then the problem of aging is reduced to a orem manageable level.

"The magnitude of the problem is further reduced by encouraging older people to utilize their abilities to the maximum degree possible; it is only when society learns to accept a more positive view of the potentialities of older people that they will be free to develop to the fullest extent. Treating the aged as helpless and dependent does violence to the facts and obscures the real contributions which old people can and do make." he concluded.

The first afternoon meeting of the series will begin at 3 p.m. Wednesday at the City Auditorium, and will be concerned with, "How to Head Off Heart and Circulatory Diseases."

Panelists will be Dr. James Donald, cardio - vascular specialist; Dr. E. B. Liddle, general surgeon; and Dr. M. M. Pick, anesthesiologist. Bryson will be the moderator.

The meetings are for all those who are interested, particularly older people, and there will be no admission or other charge. Opportunity will be given for written questions after the doctors' talks.

Dr. Freed Introduces Terms In First Seminar Session

A review of psychology's terminology for behavior patterns introduced the first session of a six - part seminar on "The Psychology of Political and Religious Choice" Monday night in Palmer Hall at Colorado College.

Dr. Dougas W. Freed, associate professor of psychology at the college, is conducting the sessions, a part of CC's Continuing Education Seminar.

Defense mechanisms, made consciously or subconsciously to satisfy desires and dictates of the individual's conscience, were defined by Dr. Freed and aligned with some examples in political and religious behavior. They include:

Repression — a situation where an individual refuses to be aware of a fact because painful associations prevent recall. Some institutional religions, Dr. Freed said, refuse to recognize that evil exists.

Regression - fixation — a condition where the individual is "stuck" on a certain idea. Applied to a political example, regression - fixation could explain the reliance by the German populace on authority of the Nazis after unfortunate experiences with a republican government.

Rationalization — an excuse to the individual as well as to others which provides a substitute reason or motive for the real motive.

Reaction formation —a condition where the individual fights feelings within himself by taking extreme action against these feelings. An example given by Dr. Freed was the cause of Elmer Gantry, who fought sin because he feared it in himself.

Projection — attributing one's own motives to somebody else's. It is most commonly found, politically, in feelings of hatred as in the case of White Southerners against the Negroes.

Displacement (displaced aggression) — taking out one's feelings against a substitute for the real motivator. Politicially, subjects under a totalitarian system fear to object to armed leaders for fear of retaliation.

Compensation — finding satisfactions in one way when satisfaction is lacking in another attempt. Politically, an example of this behavior is seen in the SA Brown Shirts in Germany in the 1930s when an excuse was found for hoodlum - ism not otherwise tolerated.

Intellectualization — looking at individual problems on an advanced intellectual level.

Attention getting — extreme positions which make an individua's actions more acceptable to him. Extreme positions, politically, include actions by the Minutemen and Black Muslims.

Dr. Freed noted two motives not related to personality which account for some religious and political choices: convention (conformity), and direct material advantage.

Convention, which operates on approval and disapproval, is a powerful influence on religious choice and "is true where people don't particularly care to adopt an unpopular position. Convention also accounts for those not intensely interested in religion and politics," Dr. Freed noted.

The seminar, attended by some 20 adults, will delve Thursday night into points included in Eric Hoffer's "The True Believer." Future seminars will meet on Feb. 25, March 4, 7 and 11.

Some 13,000 copies of the 1963 Colorado College summer session catalog will be distributed this week to students in all 50 states.

Fred A. Sondermann, director of the summer session, announced publication of the attractive 28-page book, which lists more than 130 courses in 23 academic departments at the independent college of arts and sciences.

"This is the most complete catalog in Colorado College summer session history," said Dr. Sondermann. "A new feature this year is that we have included detailed biographical sketches of visiting faculty members.

"We are proud of the number of distinguished visitors who will join our summer faculty, and we are giving prospective students an opportunity to see the quality of our program," he said.

The catalogs are being mailed to Colorado Springs area high school graduates of 1961 and 1962 who are enrolled in colleges and universities, as well as to all 1963 graduates, as a service to those Pikes Peak region students wishing to advance their academic careers during the summer months.

Dr. Sondermann said the catalogs will be available to anyone who desires to receive one. Inquiries should be addressed to him at the Colorado College summer session office, in Colorado Springs.

These reserves, Bryson said, should be used to meet" a continuing crisis that calls for the best contributions of all ages to preserve our unique character as a people and nation."

Quoting from a Michigan legislative advisory council on problems of the aging, Bryson said, "Attitudes toward the aged are a critically important factor in determining the nature and magnitude of the task facing gerentological organizations. If the community regards elderly people as basically incapable of solving their own problems, they will tend to become, in fact, less capable and more dependent.

"Given a negative orientation toward the aged, it is clear that the community must expect to provide a vast amount of aid and assistance.

"If, on the other hand, it is recognized that the great majority of those over 65 are capable of taking care of their own needs, and that many of the most creative, productive and powerful persons in any community are themselves, "older people," then the problem of aging is reduced to a orem manageable level.

"The magnitude of the problem is further reduced by encouraging older people to utilize their abilities to the maximum degree possible; it is only when society learns to accept a more positive view of the potentialities of older people that they will be free to develop to the fullest extent. Treating the aged as helpless and dependent does violence to the facts and obscures the real contributions which old people can and do make." he concluded.

The first afternoon meeting of the series will begin at 3 p.m. Wednesday at the City Auditorium, and will be concerned with, "How to Head Off Heart and Circulatory Diseases."

Panelists will be Dr. James Donald, cardio - vascular specialist; Dr. E. B. Liddle, general surgeon; and Dr. M. M. Pick, anesthesiologist. Bryson will be the moderator.

The meetings are for all those who are interested, particularly older people, and there will be no admission or other charge. Opportunity will be given for written questions after the doctors' talks.

'Strippers' On Prowl In City

Strippers were on the prowl Monday and five area residents were doing anything but shouting "Take it off."

In fact, they are probably shouting, "put it back."

The strippers were working on cars. They hit five of them Monday, according to city police reports taking everything from car windows to headlights.

Two side window panels from a sports car owned by Larry D. Thomas, 413 N. Institute Ave., were stolen from the car while it was parked on the 1,000 block of N. Nevada Avenue, police said.

David Lee Jackson, 2202 W. Vermijo St., lost the headlights and a radio from his car which was parked in a vacant lot near his home.

A generator was taken from a car owned by Margaret T. Ritter, 1918 El Parque St. The car was parked near her home and the generator was valued at $34.61.

Thieves attempted to enter a car owned by James A. Johnson, which was parked near his home at 2118 Wynkoop St. Monday and failed after breaking a rear window valued at $40.

They were more successful in entering a car owned by Larry D. Lone, 215 E. Dale St., which was parked in a parking lot at Monument Valley Park. Binoculars valued at $35 were stolen.

Motor Oil Stolen From Railroad Car

Fourteen five-gallon cans of 20-weight motor oil worth a total of $72 were stolen from the Santa Fe Railroad Company's siding on Kelker Road, the sheriff's office said Monday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Harry Orvis the oil was stored in a railroad car and the seals on the doors had been broken. From appearances at the scene it seemed the oil was first carried in a small car to a truck which was parked just off the road.

Manitou Man Fined for Excess Speed

Charles B. Bivens, 24, of Manitou Springs was fined $15 and costs in Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane's court Monday for speeding. He was driving at 85 miles per hour where the speed limit was 70. State Patrolman Pete Thiel followed him Saturday from six miles south of Fountain to within own mile north of the Pueblo-El Paso County line.

Kimberly Rene Hicks, 21, of 614 W. Platte Ave. was also charged with speeding and fined $15 and costs. She drove at 75 miles per hour Saturday on Colorado Highway 115 where the speed limit is 60. The officer was State Patrolman C. W. Hubbard.

Ernest Leo Watkins, 44, of Lytle Star Route paid a $5 fine and costs as he was driving on the wrong side of the road Saturday. The violation happened on Rock Creek Canon Road. The state patrolman was A. C. Ferrero.

Ferrero also ticketed Y. N. Newcombe, 30, of Lytle Star Route for the same offense Saturday. The defendant was on Rock Creek Canon Road at the time and a $5 fine and costs were imposed.

Following too closely Feb. 7 on Park Avenue cost Danny Ralph Hambley, 16, of 624 Glen Eyrie Court, $10 with costs. He was cited by Ferrero.

State Patrolman John L. Baker gave a ticket to Gladys Rogers Bennett, 58, of 2405 E. St. Vrain St., for careless driving Feb. 7 on Colorado Highway 27. She received a $5 fine and costs.

Harry Edgar Hutton was charged with the same violation and fined $5 and costs. Hutton, 65, of Monument was ticketed Friday on Nevada Avenue by State Patrolman Paul H. Cornell.

Driver Gets $200 Fine on Drunk Driving

Robert Eugene Marks, 23, of 1004 S. Royer St. was fined $200 and costs in Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane's court Monday for drunk driving. Marks was arrested Jan. 27 at 100 E. Las Vegas St. by Police Offier Emmett J. Butler.

Undersheriff H. Don Smith ticketed Robert Irvine Foulk Feb. 6 for disregarding a stop sign on U. S. Highway 85-87. Foulk, 46, of Security paid a $7.50 fine and $4 costs.

John H. Woodward Jr., 22, of Ft. Carson received a $10 fine and costs for improper registration. He was cited by State Patrolman Gordon Baumgardner on Colorado Highway 29, Feb. 10.

A 16-year old youth, James Rand Higbee of 11 Maverick Rd. was charged with careless driving and violating the restriction on his driver's license Feb. 6. He was stopped on St. Vrain Street by State Patrolman Pete Thiel and a $15 fine and costs was imposed.

DEAN JONES to STAR in 'YUM YUM TREE'

HOLLYWOOD. — Dean Jones will be happy but tired when he reports to David Swift to start "Under the Yum Yum Tree" in mid-March with Jack Lemmon and Carol Lynley. In order to make it, he has to shoot his last three "O'Tooles" back-to-back, which means working week-ends and evenings. But he has no complaints—is delighted to be playing the role he created on Broadway. The play was lucky for Dean. He and his wife had been separated for eight months; she flew to New York for the opening, he met her at the plane, and they've been blissful ever since. All Swift needs now is a girl for the Nan Martin role. Nan's busy being sensational in "Little Me."

Luther Davis had a brainstorm and asked Ann Sothern to play a very low shady lady in his "Lady in a Cage." Since she's been dying to get away from those sunny characters ("Producers won't let me grow up—they forget I started as a dramatic actress"), I'll be darned if he didn't get her. Olivia de Havilland, the one in the cage, loves her part. Tells me she's approaching it from a psychological viewpoint, whatever that means. I know one thing. If Davis shoots the story the way it's written, he may not get it past Paramount's front gate.

Got a hot tip that Elvis Presley had picked the girl and set the date, so checked with Col. Tom Parker. Ordinarily he refuses to dip into his boy's personal life, but he cornered Elvis and asked him. "If I had any intention of getting married, you'd be the first to know," was his answer. "If you're in love, it's wonderful" said the colonel. "I hope to be best man. Even if you quit acting, it's all right with me, if it makes you happy. But if you have plans, let me know. There are a few deals I'd like to tie down first. I've got 'em on the string—just have to tighten 'em up a bit." With that he apologized for bothering his Mint from Memphis and reported back to me. So you girls can relax—Elvis aims to remain free.

It didn't take Shelley Winters long to stir up the "Wives and Lovers" set. On her first day at work, she exploded and most everyone predicted she wouldn't finish the picture. But she was on the set next day and told me the whole thing was a "lot of nonsense." "You've arrived," I told her. "You don't have to fight any more." "O. K., Aunt Hedda. But Hollywood's getting good and dull and you can quote me. This business should be fun, interesting, exciting. This may be the machine age but nobody's gonna get me in one. I don't fit. It's not tires we're producing—this is an art medium. The director had one idea about my character; I had another. So we arrived at a third we both like."

Shirley MacLaine, after four days in traction for a pinched nerve in the neck, reported back to Billy Wilder and finished "Irma La Douce." While in the hospital her husband Steve Parker took her a gift—a carton of bubble gum. "And I couldn't even move my jaw," said Shirley. Before going some place to stretch out in the sun, she jets to Harvard as guest of the Hasty Pudding club.

Marion Hargrove and Roy Huggins had quite a set-to when they worked in TV. Roy's now vice president of Revue and Marion's on the same lot writing Rock Hudson's next picture. Hargrove passed Huggins in the commissary without a word; later got this note: "As Dickens said to Thackeray, we have been foolish long enough." Marion's answer: "So far as I know, Dickens never worked for Thackeray."

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — With as many people as pessimistic as they are now, it is difficult to visualize an important decline just yet, says James Dines & Co., Inc.

Although massive overhead supply similarly militates against a rapid advance, odds favor the eventual upside. Never forget the basic axiom that percentages always favor continuation of a trend in motion, until that trend is clearly reversed. Don't fret about being caught in another crash, Dines says, because properly placed stops will get you out in time at minimal cost.

According to International Statistical Bureau, Inc., the outlook for the aerospace industry for 1963 is most favorable. Sales and earnings will continue to gain, although margins will not show any substantial gain from the 2-3 per cent presently recorded. Dividends, which were increased slowly in 1962, may show some significant betterment this year.

Mrs. Frances Hatcher Dies; Rites Thursday

Mrs. Frances A. Hatcher, wife of Earl Hatcher, 3218 Primrose Dr., died Monday at Fitzsimons Hospital, Denver, after a long illness. She had been a resident of Colorado Springs since 1951 and was a member of the East Methodist Church.

Market Drifts Lower In Moderate Trading

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market drifted lower in moderate trading early this afternoon despite wide gains by a few specially-situated issues.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .6 at 259.3 with industrials down 1.0, rails unchanged, and utilities off .5.

Losses of most key stocks were fractional.

Some of the special stocks rose as much as 3 or more points.

The trend was lower among steels, motors, utilities, aerospace issues, airlines, tobaccos, and oils. Nonferrous metals and rails were mixed.

The list was backing away from its latest recovery high. It bumped against overhanging resistance in the form of stock for sale yesterday afternoon. Although the day ended with a slight gain, the trend was reversed.

Burroughs advanced more than a point as Wall Street speculated about a possible merger, even though the company has denied it.

United Carbon attracted buying after news came that the Internal Revenue Service has issued satisfactory rulings covering the tax aspects of the sale of United Carbon's assets to Ashland Oil. United Carbon rose 3¾ to 106 on a block of 3,800 shares.

American Telephone's earnings, though higher, were uninspiring to Wall Street. AT&T slipped about a point. Consolidated Edison took a similar loss. Philadelphia Electric dropped ½ to 30¾ on 18,300 shares.

Chrysler was steady at the start but later showed a fractional loss along with most other leading auto stocks. Studebaker held firm.

Fractional losses were shown also by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, International Nickel, Allied Chemical, Texaco, and Liggett & Myers.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were mixed in quiet trading. Heli-Coil rose more than a point. Up fractionally were Microwave Associates, Technicolor, Brown Co., and Teleregister. Syntex lost more than a point. Down fractionally were Universal Controls, Associated Oil Gas, National Video "A," Perfect Poto, and Reinsurance Investment. Webb Knapp was active and unchanged.

Corporate bonds were higher. U.S. Government bonds were mixed.

Sun Life Sales $1 Billion in Year; To Hike Dividends

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada sold more than $1 billion of life insurance in 1962 for the fourth consecutive year and will increase policy dividends in 1963 for the 14th consecutive year, David A. Schilken, Sun Life manager in Denver, announced following the company's 92nd annual meeting.

Forward strides by the Sun Life during the past year also included the mutualization of the company, which was commenced in 1958 and completed in December, 1962.

Sun Life, which is 12th largest life company in North America, sold $1,128,440,000 of life insurance in 1962 to bring total insurance in force at year end to $10,840,722,000, an increase of 6.4 per cent over the year. About a third of this protects U.S. policyholders. Of the total, $4,265,659,000 is in Group life insurance and the balance in individual contracts. Adding annuities, the company's combined total life insurance and the balance in insurance and annuities is the equivalent of $13,641,161,000 of life insurance.

During the year the company paid $199 million in policy benefits, of which two-thirds was paid to living policyholders and annuitants and one-third to the beneficiaries of deceased policyholders. Dividends to be paid to Sun Life policyholders in 1963 will be $46.8 million — 5 per cent more than in 1962.

New Machine Will Keep Quotes Up With Market

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market has its own population explosion problem. The number of shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange grows mightily. And so, too, during the 1950s did the number of shareowners.

The trouble comes when either a bullish or a bearish enthusiasm seizes so many shareowners that the exchange's recording system is swamped. This leaves all stock owners—some 17 million Americans now by the latest estimate—wondering what happened to the value of their holdings.

There is wear and tear on countless nervous sytems, and maybe even some martial spats over the hazy state of the family fortune. Newspapers can't get the quotations in time for the usual editions. And the more shareowners the greater the curiosity about how they and their neighbors are faring. Many of the public with a flare for thinking the worst decide the silence means the country may be going to pot.

There is nothing like the word that "the tape is running late," meaning the latest prices aren't available yet, to augment the trend of the market in whichever direction it may have been going when last reported.

The New York Stock Exchange assures its many kibitizers that it is turning to automation to speed the latest prices to the public. Hopefully, in a year or two there won't be any more long waits, as last May and June, to find out what really went on in Wall Street.

The exchange's stock ticker network serves more than 700 cities in the United States and Canada. In his annual report today the exchange president, G. Keith Funston, assures this wide audience that a new printer is being developed that is 80 per cent faster than the present one.

The Teletype Corp. machine may be able to transmit 1,000 characters per minute. This will get the latest prices, once they are recorded, out to the public at a speed that only an avalanche of trading could smother.

To record the transactions, International Business Machines Corp. computers equipment will be in operation early in 1965.

An optical reader will electronically speed sales and bid-asked information from the trading floor to the computer. This intricate system will continuously determine total volume, olume for each stock, open, high, low, last sale prices and bid-asked quotes.

The exchange says the new system will be able to handle trading volume in excess of 16 million shares a day. On May 29 the volume rose to 14,750,000 shares, and the tape ran long after trading closed.

The automated quotation service also will be able to handle 400,000 phone inquiries a day and respond to 150 inquiries for prices simultaneously.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — With as many people as pessimistic as they are now, it is difficult to visualize an important decline just yet, says James Dines & Co., Inc.

Although massive overhead supply similarly militates against a rapid advance, odds favor the eventual upside. Never forget the basic axiom that percentages always favor continuation of a trend in motion, until that trend is clearly reversed. Don't fret about being caught in another crash, Dines says, because properly placed stops will get you out in time at minimal cost.

According to International Statistical Bureau, Inc., the outlook for the aerospace industry for 1963 is most favorable. Sales and earnings will continue to gain, although margins will not show any substantial gain from the 2-3 per cent presently recorded. Dividends, which were increased slowly in 1962, may show some significant betterment this year.

Market Drifts Lower In Moderate Trading

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market drifted lower in moderate trading early this afternoon despite wide gains by a few specially-situated issues.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .6 at 259.3 with industrials down 1.0, rails unchanged, and utilities off .5.

Losses of most key stocks were fractional.

Some of the special stocks rose as much as 3 or more points.

The trend was lower among steels, motors, utilities, aerospace issues, airlines, tobaccos, and oils. Nonferrous metals and rails were mixed.

The list was backing away from its latest recovery high. It bumped against overhanging resistance in the form of stock for sale yesterday afternoon. Although the day ended with a slight gain, the trend was reversed.

Burroughs advanced more than a point as Wall Street speculated about a possible merger, even though the company has denied it.

United Carbon attracted buying after news came that the Internal Revenue Service has issued satisfactory rulings covering the tax aspects of the sale of United Carbon's assets to Ashland Oil. United Carbon rose 3 ¾ to 106 on a block of 3,800 shares.

American Telephone's earnings, though higher, were uninspiring to Wall Street. AT&T slipped about a point. Consolidated Edison took a similar loss. Philadelphia Electric dropped ½ to 30¾ on 18,300 shares.

Chrysler was steady at the start but later showed a fractional loss along with most other leading auto stocks. Studebaker held firm.

Fractional losses were shown also by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, International Nickel, Allied Chemical, Texaco, and Liggett & Myers.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were mixed in quiet trading. Heli-Coil rose more than a point. Up fractionally were Microwave Associates, Technicolor, Brown Co., and Teleregister. Syntex lost more than a point. Down fractionally were Universal Controls, Associated Oil Gas, National Video "A," Perfect Poto, and Reinsurance Investment. Webb Knapp was active and unchanged.

Corporate bonds were higher. U.S. Government bonds were mixed.

Two Car Prowl Incidents Reported

Two cases of car prowl in the vicinity of the Ivywild Inn were reported to the sheriff's office Monday.

The first happened to Cecil W. Hutchins of 1030 Montrose Ave. He told Deputy Sheriffs Jack Ames and Vincent Denboske that someone entered his unlocked car when it was parked at the rear of the Ivywild Inn and took an Air Force blouse with the NORAD emblem on the sleeve, along with a woman's skirt. The articles were worth a total of $27.

The second incident happened to Merill White of 515 Warren St. whose car was also parked at the rear of the inn. Ames and Denboske said a pair of pliers, a screw driver and other tools were stolen from the glove compartment.

New Machine Will Keep Quotes Up With Market

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market has its own population explosion problem. The number of shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange grows mightily. And so, too, during the 1950s did the number of shareowners.

The trouble comes when either a bullish or a bearish enthusiasm seizes so many shareowners that the exchange's recording system is swamped. This leaves all stock owners—some 17 million Americans now by the latest estimate—wondering what happened to the value of their holdings.

There is wear and tear on countless nervous sytems, and maybe even some martial spats over the hazy state of the family fortune. Newspapers can't get the quotations in time for the usual editions. And the more shareowners the greater the curiosity about how they and their neighbors are faring. Many of the public with a flare for thinking the worst decide the silence means the country may be going to pot.

There is nothing like the word that "the tape is running late," meaning the latest prices aren't available yet, to augment the trend of the market in whichever direction it may have been going when last reported.

The New York Stock Exchange assures its many kibitizers that it is turning to automation to speed the latest prices to the public. Hopefully, in a year or two there won't be any more long waits, as last May and June, to find out what really went on in Wall Street.

The exchange's stock ticker network serves more than 700 cities in the United States and Canada. In his annual report today the exchange president, G. Keith Funston, assures this wide audience that a new printer is being developed that is 80 per cent faster than the present one.

The Teletype Corp. machine may be able to transmit 1,000 characters per minute. This will get the latest prices, once they are recorded, out to the public at a speed that only an avalanche of trading could smother.

To record the transactions, International Business Machines Corp. computers equipment will be in operation early in 1965.

An optical reader will electronically speed sales and bid-asked information from the trading floor to the computer. This intricate system will continuously determine total volume, olume for each stock, open, high, low, last sale prices and bid-asked quotes.

The exchange says the new system will be able to handle trading volume in excess of 16 million shares a day. On May 29 the volume rose to 14,750,000 shares, and the tape ran long after trading closed.

The automated quotation service also will be able to handle 400,000 phone inquiries a day and respond to 150 inquiries for prices simultaneously.

Okie State Takes Lead As Mizzou Upsets Buffs

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oklahoma State is alone at the top in a wild four-team race in Big Eight basketball as the result of Colorado's upset by Missouri. Kansas State can tie the Cowboys for first place by whipping Kansas at Lawrence tonight.

Missouri's Ray Bob Carey stole the ball and went all the way for a layup with five seconds left which beat Colorado's shaky defending champions 60-58 at Columbia Monday night. Oklahoma clipped Nebraska 84-77 with little Eddie Evans scoring 22 points in the other league game.

Colorado skidded from a first place tie to fourth place, but the race is so close the Buffs are a scant half-game behind O-State. Here is the way the top four lineup:

O-State 7-2, Kansas State 6-2, Iowa State 8-3 and Colorado 7-3. Any one of the four could be alone in first place after Saturday night games.

O-State plays at Colorado and I-State at K-State Saturday night. In a pair of second division games that night, Kansas plays at Nebraska and Oklahoma at Mizzou.

Coch Tex Winter's K-State team will be in good position to take it all — if it gets by Kansas. K-State will be trying to even matters for Kansas' 90-88 four-overtime victory for the championship of the Big Eight Holiday Tournament.

The Wildcats dropped five of their first six games this season, but have won 10 of their last 13 for an over-all 11-8 record. Kansas stood 7-4 after its tournament victory but has skidded to seven defeats in nine conference games since then.

Colorado's determined rally in the last five minutes nearly turned the tide against inspired Mizzou. The Buffs called time out with 58 seconds left and decided to work for one shot with the score 58-all. Bob Carey spoiled it by stealing the ball from Jim Davis.

Carey led the scoring with 19 points. Ken Charlton, hampered with two bad knees, had 18 for the Buffs. Charlton averaged 25.8 points in the first six league games, playing on a left knee which required occasional drainage after surgery last year. Charlton hurt his right knee against Kansas Feb. 9 and has averaged only 14.3 in four games since then. Colorado dropped two of the four.

Valley of Tears

In at last sense, baseball is the outcast of the sports world. That is, when coaches and front-office types from any other activity come before the public ear they usually sound like it's a trip to the wailing wall. Almost universally, baseball men are just the opposite as they all claim to be world-beaters with the greatest assemblage of talent ever.

And far from departing from this role was the Denver Bears' Eddie Glennon, who made a somewhat unexpected appearance at the local Quarterback Club at the Palmer House on Monday. Glennon was actually set for a pre-season briefing before this suburbia fandom next week, but explained he would be on his way to Florida and spring training by that time.

"In this Valley of Tears," as Glennon termed the weekly reports of past and future games by the coaching set of the community, "would make one think that the clergy present are here for confession rather than as interested fans. It sounds like a few of these coaches could use them during their games — as long as they have a direct pipeline above."

The Bears' general manager wasn't about to follow the example of the basketball coaches or hockey mentor Tony Frasca in outlining the hardships facing his baseball team for the onrushing season.

"We changed affiliations from Detroit to the Milwaukee Braves this past year because we felt we would have a better working agreement," Glennon said. "The Braves have some of the best players in minor league ball in their chain and we think we'll have a winner with them."

The Bears boss-man was a little reluctant to make big noise over the new alignment with the Pacific Coast League after the demise of the American Association, stating mainly that so far there has been the best of cooperation among teams of the newly enlarged league.

Glennon, who calls on some 30 years of experience in baseball, rather used in the time-worn speel of baesball men by quickly skipping around the bases by personnel — being careful not to pause enough for anyone to take note of whom he was speaking.

"We'll be strong down the middle," Glennon said with another summertime cliche, pointing out that every good club tries to build around the imaginary line between catcher and center field. "In fact, we think we might have one of the best catchers in the minor leagues with us this year."

The Denver GM also figures they have one of the best club managers in the minors in Jack Tigh — which should make Glennon feel something like a father of brand new triplets since he has a differene league, new affiliation with the majors and Tigh is replacing Frank Skaff as skipper.

"Denver is only a couple years away from the majors right now," Glennon predicted. "This area has been under study since we've had a good record in the past for interest, it's a good stopping off place between the two coasts, and our players are only a thin line away from major league talent anyway.

"I expect to see Denver among the major leagues by 1966," Glennon said.

The Bears general manager got his start in the erstwhile national pastime under "Mr. Baseball" himself, the great Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics. For six years he worked in promotions and public relations before taking his first GM position with the Wilmington (Del.) club of the Eastern League. Then some seven years later he went to Birmingham of the Southern Association where he was twice voted "Baseball's Outstanding Minor League Executive of the Year."

"Willie Mays was easily the best player I've ever worked with," Glennon said. "But another great one was Jimmy Piersall.

"A lot of people think Piersall is crazy," Glennon said of the center fielder who has been shipped around the majors like a crate of oranges. "But I think he's just a little bit eccentric — with a big flare of showmanship."

Glennon then related a few tales of Piersall's feats, which included several times "he just about outran the ball in center field," according to the Bears money counter. "How we'd like to have him with us, tho. A guy like that can just about double your gate receipts — just from the stories fans have heard about him.

"They'll come out just to see what he's going to do next. It's too bad we don't have a few more Jimmy Piersall's around."

Glennon figures the greatest trick Piersall ever pulled was the time he watched a third strike go past — then wheeled on the umpire as he shouted "Strike Three!"

"When Jimmy pulled out that water gun and shot the ump. . . well, the expression on the ump's face was really something. He thought he was really shot. And with Piersall — no one was too sure he wasn't!"

Tigers End Long Drouth

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Monday night at Cossitt Hall Red Eastlack's courageous quintet saw Dame Fortune climb off the opposition bench for the first time in 21 long evenings of basketball as the Tigers wiped out a 13 point deficit in the final 12 minutes and posted their first hardwood victory in nearly a year, 57-55. The victim —Rocky Mountain Conference leader, Western State.

The victory accomplished nothing for CC as far as league standings are concerned. That situation is long since beyond repair. But what it might do in the morale category undoubtedly had the Mountaineers wishing they were back in Gunnison today. The two teams polish off the two game set with an 8 p.m. contest at Cossitt this evening and off last night's showing the Tigers must rate an even choice to pull a repeat.

The end of the long-long string Monday came so swiftly that the scant gathering of less than 100 faithful had little time to savor it. With the action nearing the midway point of the second half, the contest had taken on a familiar pattern. CC had lost an early lead, was gradually slipping further behind, and disappointed rooters were about to toss in the towel.

Not so, the Tigers! In what can only be interpreted as a credit to both coach and players, the team suddenly caught fire and this time in the closing minutes good fortune switched allegiance. CC wrested the lead from the startled Mountaineers and kept it.

The comeback was launched with 11:15 remaining in the game and Western smugly coasting on a 13-point advantage. Gregg Smith, who turns off and on like a hot water faucet, suddenly turned on and the Bengals were on their way.

Smith pumped in a goal to cut the margin to 47-36 but nearly a minute went by before Bob Baker tossed in another from far outcourt. Western then countered on a bucket by Laverne Blue but freshman Phil Hart, who turned in an outstanding game for the Tigers, cracked a jump shot 15 seconds later.

Bob Heiny sank a free toss and Smith another goal to pull the Tigers within 49-43 with 7:15 left but hot-shooting Paul Weber got WSC back on the board with seven minutes remaining.

The Tigers still trailed by eight at 55-47 with 5:18 left when the final amazing drive got underway. Aided by a sudden cold streak by the previously warm Mountaineers, CC quickly cut the lead to pieces. Heiny and Hart hit goals within the next minute and the tying markets came on free throws, two by Hart and a pair by Smith. The 55-55 deadlock came with 3:44 left and Western could never regroup.

Hart got the winner on a beautiful drive up the key with 1:01 showing, setting the stage for a tense finish. Twice more Western had the ball and the Mountaineers got off three more shots before CC came down with possession for the final time with 10 seconds left. Baker was standing in backcourt holding the ball when the final buzzer sounded.

In the early stages CC had built a 10-6 lead but surrendered the advantage at 13-11 with 8:05 remaining in the first half. Western then set the pace until the Tigers launched their late comeback.

Hart, who led the rebounding with nine, shared the scoring lead for CC with Smith. Both had 15 while Heiny contributed 11 and Baker 10 in one of the more balanced showings by the team this season. Adams, who was deadly from outside during the middle portion of the contest, topped Western with 17.

For the Tigers, who have been walloped on occasion while also losing some heartbreakers during that 21 game nightmare, Monday's experience was like a breath of fresh air. The Mountaineers and upcoming opponents, Adams State and CSC, can now only hope that CC doesn't inhale too deeply.

Cincinnati Keeps Top Spot in Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cincinnati kept a strong hold on its position as the No. 1 college basketball team in the country today despite the upset which snapped it 37-game winninge streak.

While the Bearcats were losing their first game since Jan. 10, 1962, to Wichita 65-64 last Saturday night, their closest pursuer for national honors, Loyola of Chicago, also was taking it on the shin. Loyola bowed to Bowling Green 92-75 for its first defeat of the season.

As a result of these developments, The Associated Press' special panel of sports writers and broadcasters decided Cincinnati still should be rated the nation's best team but that Loyola, loser by 17 points, couldn't be figured better than third, behind Duke, which racked up a couple of one-sided victories.

Cincinnati, gunning for its third straight National Collegiate Athletic Association championship, drew 34 of the 42 first-place votes. The other eight went to Duke.

Eight schools were named for at-large berths Monday in the 25-team NCAA field while three acceptances were received for the 12-team NIT at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The NCAA entrants include Loyola of Chicago and New York University, both ranked among the nation's Top Ten in this week's Associated Press poll.

Loyola, ranked No. 3 with a 22-1 record, will play a first round game in the Mideast regionals. Tenth-ranked NYU, 13-2, is an at-large selection in the East regionals.

Colorado State University, 16-4; Texas Western, 16-5 and Oklahoma City, 15-7, were chosen for the Midwest Regionals. Seattle, 17-4; Oregon State, 14-6 and Utah State, 19-5, will take part in the Far West regionals.

The three teams accepting NIT bids were Miami of Florida, 20-4; Providence, 15-4 and Canisius, 14-4. The tournament will be held March 14-23.

Only three at-large positions remain to be filled in the NCAA bracket, two from the East and the other from the Mideast. One of the Eastern representatives will be the Ivy League champion. Fourteen other conference champions automatically qualify for the tourney.

The opening round regional eliminations get underway at various sites around the country March 9 and March 11. Winners advance to the regional finals at College Park, Md., East Lansing, Mch., Lawrence, Kan., and Provo, Utah. The semifinals and the finals of the NCAA championships will be held at Freedom Hall in Louisville, March 22-23.

Nice weather

...for people in a Mercury

When you're pushing two tons of automobile through a downpour, it's a real strain trying to keep on the straight and narrow. Unless you happen to be driving a new Mercury Monterey. This car features a good idea called the "Breezeway" rear window and Flo-Thru Ventilation that work together to keep the inside clear of blue stale air and steam. With sidewindows and vents closed tight! The result is, you can breathe better, hear better, see better...and enjoy the rain along with the farmers!

If you've got a new car in the back of your mind, we hope you'll step forward and give us a chance to demonstrate how this ingenious new roofline and automatic rear window work (to your advantage) winter and summer. There's really nothing like it on the road today. And it costs you nothing extra. Neither does our big 390 V/8 power-plant, our stretched-out warranty, self-adjusting brakes, cushion-link suspension, foamy seats, self-cleaning spark plugs, two year anti-freeze protection and a long list of other luxury features. Maybe this is why people say, "The big new '63 Mercs are a lot more car for the money!"

Okie State Takes Lead As Mizzou Upsets Buffs

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oklahoma State is alone at the top in a wild four-team race in Big Eight basketball as the result of Colorado's upset by Missouri. Kansas State can tie the Cowboys for first place by whipping Kansas at Lawrence tonight.

Missouri's Ray Bob Carey stole the ball and went all the way for a layup with five seconds left which beat Colorado's shaky defending champions 60-58 at Columbia Monday night. Oklahoma clipped Nebraska 84-77 with little Eddie Evans scoring 22 points in the other league game.

Colorado skidded from a first place tie to fourth place, but the race is so close the Buffs are a scant half-game behind O-State. Here is the way the top four line-up:

O-State 7-2, Kansas State 6-2, Iowa State 8-3 and Colorado 7-3. Any one of the four could be alone in first place after Saturday night games.

O-State plays at Colorado and I-State at K-State Saturday night. In a pair of second division games that night, Kansas plays at Nebraska and Oklahoma at Mizzou.

Coch Tex Winter's K-State team will be in good position to take it all — if it gets by Kansas. K-State will be trying to even matters for Kansas' 90-88 four-overtime victory for the championship of the Big Eight Holiday Tournament.

The Wildcats dropped five of their first six games this season, but have won 10 of their last 13 for an over-all 11-8 record. Kansas stood 7-4 after its tournament victory but has skidded to seven defeats in nine conference games since then.

Colorado's determined rally in the last five minutes nearly turned the tide against inspired Mizzou. The Buffs called time out with 58 seconds left and decided to work for one shot with the score 58-all. Bob Carey spolied it by stealing the ball from Jim Davis.

Carey led the scoring with 19 points. Ken Charlton, hampered with two bad knees, had 18 for the Buffs. Charlton averaged 25.8 points in the first six league games, playing on a left knee which required occasional drainage after surgery last year. Charlton hurt his right knee against Kansas Feb. 9 and has averaged only 14.3 in four games since then. Colorado dropped two of the four.

Valley of Tears

In at last sense, baseball is the outcast of the sports world. That is, when coaches and front-office types from any other activity come before the public ear they usually sound like it's a trip to the wailing wall. Almost universally, baseball men are just the opposite as they all claim to be world-beaters with the greatest assemblage of talent ever.

And far from departing from this role was the Denver Bears' Eddie Glennon, who made a somewhat unexpected appearance at the local Quarterback Club at the Palmer House on Monday. Glennon was actually set for a pre-season briefing before this suburbia fandom next week, but explained he would be on his way to Florida and spring training by that time.

"In this Valley of Tears," as Glennon termed the weekly reports of past and future games by the coaching set of the community, "would make one think that the clergy present are here for confession rather than as interested fans. It sounds like a few of these coaches could use them during their games — as long as they have a direct pipeline above."

The Bears' general manager wasn't about to follow the example of the basketball coaches or hockey mentor Tony Frasca in outlining the hardships facing his baseball team for the onrushing season.

"We changed affiliations from Detroit to the Milwaukee Braves this past year because we felt we would have a better working agreement," Glennon said. "The Braves have some of the best players in minor league ball in their chain and we think we'll have a winner with them."

The Bears boss-man was a little reluctant to make big noise over the new alignment with the Pacific Coast League after the demise of the American Association, stating mainly that so far there has been the best of cooperation among teams of the newly enlarged league.

Glennon, who calls on some 30 years of experience in baseball, rather used in the time-worn speel of baesball men by quickly skipping around the bases by personnel — being careful not to pause enough for anyone to take note of whom he was speaking.

"We'll be strong down the middle," Glennon said with another summertime cliche, pointing out that every good club tries to build around the imaginary line between catcher and center field. "In fact, we think we might have one of the best catchers in the minor leagues with us this year."

The Denver GM also figures they have one of the best club managers in the minors in Jack Tigh — which should make Glennon feel something like a father of brand new triplets since he has a differene league, new affiliation with the majors and Tigh is replacing Frank Skaff as skipper.

"Denver is only a couple years away from the majors right now," Glennon predicted. "This area has been under study since we've had a good record in the past for interest, it's a good stopping off place between the two coasts, and our players are only a thin line away from major league talent anyway.

"I expect to see Denver among the major leagues by 1966," Glennon said.

The Bears general manager got his start in the erstwhile national pastime under "Mr. Baseball" himself, the great Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics. For six years he worked in promotions and public relations before taking his first GM position with the Wilmington (Del.) club of the Eastern League. Then some seven years later he went to Birmingham of the Southern Association where he was twice voted "Baseball's Outstanding Minor League Executive of the Year."

"Willie Mays was easily the best player I've ever worked with," Glennon said. "But another great one was Jimmy Piersall.

"A lot of people think Piersall is crazy," Glennon said of the center fielder who has been shipped around the majors like a crate of oranges. "But I think he's just a little bit eccentric — with a big flare of showmanship."

Glennon then related a few tales of Piersall's feats, which included several times "he just about outran the ball in center field," according to the Bears money counter. "How we'd like to have him with us, tho. A guy like that can just about double your gate receipts — just from the stories fans have heard about him.

"They'll come out just to see what he's going to do next. It's too bad we don't have a few more Jimmy Piersall's around."

Glennon figures the greatest trick Piersall ever pulled was the time he watched a third strike go past — then wheeled on the umpire as he shouted "Strike Three!"

"When Jimmy pulled out that water gun and shot the ump. . . well, the expression on the ump's face was really something. He thought he was really shot. And with Piersall — no one was too sure he wasn't!"

Tigers End Long Drouth

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

When the Colorado College Tigers decide to break a losing streak, they don't go about it with just anybody as opposition!

Monday night at Cossitt Hall Red Eastlack's courageous quintet saw Dame Fortune climb off the opposition bench for the first time in 21 long evenings of basketball as the Tigers wiped out a 13 point deficit in the final 12 minutes and posted their first hardwood victory in nearly a year, 57-55. The victim —Rocky Mountain Conference leader, Western State.

The victory accomplished nothing for CC as far as league standings are concerned. That situation is long since beyond repair. But what it might do in the morale category undoubtedly had the Mountaineers wishing they were back in Gunnison today. The two teams polish off the two game set with an 8 p.m. contest at Cossitt this evening and off last night's showing the Tigers must rate an even choice to pull a repeat.

The end of the long-long string Monday came so swiftly that the scant gathering of less than 100 faithful had little time to savor it. With the action nearing the midway point of the second half, the contest had taken on a familiar pattern. CC had lost an early lead, was gradually slipping further behind, and disappointed rooters were about to toss in the towel.

Not so, the Tigers! In what can only be interpreted as a credit to both coach and players, the team suddenly caught fire and this time in the closing minutes good fortune switched allegiance. CC wrested the lead from the startled Mountaineers and kept it.

The comeback was launched with 11:15 remaining in the game and Western smugly coasting on a 13-point advantage. Gregg Smith, who turns off and on like a hot water faucet, suddenly turned on and the Bengals were on their way.

Smith pumped in a goal to cut the margin to 47-36 but nearly a minute went by before Bob Baker tossed in another from far outcourt. Western then countered on a bucket by Laverne Blue but freshman Phil Hart, who turned in an outstanding game for the Tigers, cracked a jump shot 15 seconds later.

Bob Heiny sank a free toss and Smith another goal to pull the Tigers within 49-43 with 7:15 left but hot-shooting Paul Weber got WSC back on the board with seven minutes remaining.

The Tigers still trailed by eight at 55-47 with 5:18 left when the final amazing drive got underway. Aided by a sudden cold streak by the previously warm Mountaineers, CC quickly cut the lead to pieces. Heiny and Hart hit goals within the next minute and the tying markets came on free throws, two by Hart and a pair by Smith. The 55-55 deadlock came with 3:44 left and Western could never regroup.

Hart got the winner on a beautiful drive up the key with 1:01 showing, setting the stage for a tense finish. Twice more Western had the ball and the Mountaineers got off three more shots before CC came down with possession for the final time with 10 seconds left. Baker was standing in backcourt holding the ball when the final buzzer sounded.

In the early stages CC had built a 10-6 lead but surrendered the advantage at 13-11 with 8:05 remaining in the first half. Western then set the pace until the Tigers launched their late comeback.

Hart, who led the rebounding with nine, shared the scoring lead for CC with Smith. Both had 15 while Heiny contributed 11 and Baker 10 in one of the more balanced showings by the team this season. Adams, who was deadly from outside during the middle portion of the contest, topped Western with 17.

For the Tigers, who have been walloped on occasion while also losing some heartbreakers during that 21 game nightmare, Monday's experience was like a breath of fresh air. The Mountaineers and upcoming opponents, Adams State and CSC, can now only hope that CC doesn't inhale too deeply.

The fields for the two major post-season college basketball tournaments began taking shape today with 11 teams accepting bids to compete in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship and the National Invitation Tournament.

Eight schools were named for at-large berths Monday in the 25-team NCAA field while three acceptances were received for the 12-team NIT at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The NCAA entrants include Loyola of Chicago and New York University, both ranked among the nation's Top Ten in this week's Associated Press poll.

Loyola, ranked No. 3 with a 22-1 record, will play a first round game in the Mideast regionals. Tenth-ranked NYU, 13-2, is an at-large selection in the East regionals.

Colorado State University, 16-4; Texas Western, 16-5 and Oklahoma City, 15-7, were chosen for the Midwest Regionals. Seattle, 17-4; Oregon State, 14-6 and Utah State, 19-5, will take part in the Far West regionals.

The three teams accepting NIT bids were Miami of Florida, 20-4; Providence, 15-4 and Canisius, 14-4. The tournament will be held March 14-23.

Only three at-large positions remain to be filled in the NCAA bracket, two from the East and the other from the Mideast. One of the Eastern representatives will be the Ivy League champion. Fourteen other conference champions automatically qualify for the tourney.

The opening round regional eliminations get underway at various sites around the country March 9 and March 11. Winners advance to the regional finals at College Park, Md., East Lansing, Mch., Lawrence, Kan., and Provo, Utah. The semifinals and the finals of the NCAA championships will be held at Freedom Hall in Louisville, March 22-23.

In YAL action, the Rovers downed the Fountain Valley Pups, 3-1, in a heavyweight contest and the Barons whitewashed the Maroons, 3-0 in the middleweight division.

Palmer Grapplers Nail Two More Tourney Berths

PUEBLO — Palmer wrestlers nailed down two more state tournament berths and narrowly missed a third here Monday as the South Central League teams held comeback matches following the District competition at Trinidad last weekend.

Mike Potter earned a 9-4 decision over Frank Zuniga of Trinidad in the 120 pound class and Larry Nicks easily decisioned Phil Head of Centennial, 6-0, in the 138 pound division th earn the right to represent the local school in the state finals at Englewood beginning Thursday. The Terrors' only loser Monday was Joe Parkinson who was edged by Tom Hocking of Centennial in the 127 pound class. Parkinson lost on a referee' decision in overtime.

Potter and Nicks join 180-pounder, Ward Huffman, who nailed down his state berth as a runner-up last Saturday at Trinidad. The only other local representative from the AAA schools will be Jim Sutton of Wasson, who won the 133 pound championship at Trinidad.

Chicago Still In NBA Cellar

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago seems doomed to finish last in the Western Division of the National Basketball Association, but Terry Dischinger of the Zephyrs has the field goal percentage championship in his grasp.

Latest weekly statistics released today show the former Purdue All-America, in his first NBA season, tops this category with 401 field goals in 761 shots for a percentage of .527.

Wilt Chamberlain of San Francisco is second to Dischinger with .520 and continues the scoring leader with [illegible] points for an average of 45.8.

When you're pushing two tons of automobile through a downpour, it's a real strain trying to keep on the straight and narrow. Unless you happen to be driving a new Mercury Monterey. This car features a good idea called the "Breezeway" rear window and Flo-Thru Ventilation that work together to keep the inside clear of blue stale air and steam. With sidewindows and vents closed tight! The result is, you can breathe better, hear better, see better...and enjoy the rain along with the farmers!

If you've got a new car in the back of your mind, we hope you'll step forward and give us a chance to demonstrate how this ingenious new roofline and automatic rear window work (to your advantage) winter and summer. There's really nothing like it on the road today. And it costs you nothing extra. Neither does our big 390 V/8 power-plant, our stretched-out warranty, self-adjusting brakes, cushion-link suspension, foamy seats, self-cleaning spark plugs, two year anti-freeze protection and a long list of other luxury features. Maybe this is why people say, "The big new '63 Mercs are a lot more car for the money!"

Four PPL Cage Teams Battle for Loop Title

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Four Pikes Peak League cage teams are suiting up in their best armor preparing for a basketball showndown for the coveted conference crown Friday night.

Two-time PPL winner Salida leaves its home nest to tangle with unpredictable Fountain. The Spartans need a victory to stay in the keen loop race along with Widefield, Harrison, and Florence.

In other PPL encounters Friday, Widefield entertains lowly Leadville, Manitou Springs battles Academy High, Florence and Harrison slug it out for key position in league standings, and Cheyenne Mountain travels to Denver Christian for a non-leaguer.

Last Friday the Spartans knocked Academy High out of contention for the loop title via a 59-53 triumph to snap a two-game losing streak. In other PPL games Harrison nipped Manitou, 62-61, in an overtime contest; Florence eliminated highly regarded Cheyenne from a share of the league leadership, 63-47; and Leadville finally managed to record a league victory over Fountain, 50-49, in the last second of play. Widefield downed Pueblo Catholic, 52-49, in a non-conference game.

On Saturday, Salida whacked Canon Abbey, 90-60 in a non-league game.

The tall, talented Spartans proved too much for their smaller opponents as Don Schmidli's cagers dominated the backboards to outrebound the Kadets, 67 to 38. David Lantz topped his teammates in scoring with 15 points and yanked in 22 rebounds for the southern team. Flashy John Julius of Academy High continued his torrid scoring pace as the Kadet guard pumped in 21 points for a losing cause.

Julius is presently in second place for the individual scoring race next to Bill Raines of Cheyenne, who has 19.6 points scored per contest. Julius has a 17.5 mean, but the Kadets were awed by their taller opponents and could only tally 32 per cent of their field goal attempts.

The Spartans, on the other hand, enjoyed a successful scoring spree hitting better than 35 per cent as they connected 26 of 70 attempts. The Kadets made good 16 of 50 shots.

Altho John Delventhal's "Big Blue" rallied for 21 points in the final period, it was anti-climactic as the host team built up a comfortable lead thruout the first three periods.

With two seconds remaining in the first overtime period, Harrison overcame a 61-60 deficit to beat Manitou at the charity lane. The Mustangs committed a personal foul on Tom Elliott with two seconds left on the clock and the Panther made good his one-and-one try at the free throw lane to win the game for Harrison, 62-61. The Harrison triumph also eliminated Manitou from contention in the race for the PPL title.

Cheyenne, one of the potentially best cage teams in the conference, allowed a smaller team to knock them out of a choice spot in league standings as Florence simply outscored the Indians. Ken Weaver pumped in 28 points to lead the Huskie victory and established the highest individual scoring record this season.

Despite an outstanding effort by Cheyenne's Bill Raines, who tallied 21 points, and Joe Folk's 10 points, the Indians went under to the determined Florence quintet.

Widefield experienced little competition from their visiting guests from Pueblo Catholic as Tom Petersen's Gladiators won their non-league contest, 53-49. Rusty Wasinger paced the Widefield cagers with 14 points.

SCL Dead Heat Probable Altho Miners Keep Lead

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Anyone who thinks the South Central League isn't involved in a whacky winter of basketball—take a glance at these items.

1. Trinidad, a team that won exactly one basketball game during the entire South Central League campaign last winter, currently is pacing this year's race with a 10-2 mark and there are only three weeks to go.

2. The Miners remained in the top spot last week by closing out a perfect home season with a 63-57 defeat of Pueblo South, a team which had defeated them by 32 points three weeks earlier.

3. Wasson, a club which averaged 79 points per contest in its first two league starts and has an overall SCL average of 65, is suddenly plastering opponents all over the court—with defense.

4. A race, which had figured to produce nothing more than a few yawns before the season got underway, currently has a very good chance of ending up in a three or four way tie for the championship.

This, then, is the status as the state's southernmost AAA circuit heads into the final three weeks of its regular schedule, altho at the present rate playoffs may still be in progress after the state tournament is already over.

Trinidad has a week to sit back and survey the scramble after its important victory over South. The Miners got in an extra game early in the campaign against Grand Junction and thus draw a bye this weekend. It may be an uncomfortable rest, however, as the three challengers are all matched against second division opponents and if the form sheet prevails, Trinidad will be sharing its lead with Pueblo Central come next week with South and Wasson a scant game behind.

Central may have the roughest task of the three. The Wildcats travel to Colorado Springs to meet improved Palmer and if the Terrors can rebound from the disappointment of last Friday's pounding by Wasson, the 'Cats could get their whiskers twisted. Palmer can match Central in size and the Tribe has shown spurts of fairly good basketball recently.

South and Wasson should get by East and Centennial but neither Bill Brown of the Colts or Wasson's Dick Westbay are taking these contests lightly. East and South are regular rivals and Wasson has already suffered one loss and a narrow excape on the Pueblo floor this season.

Only two games matching contenders remain on the schedule and none come up this week. Trinidad goes to Wasson Mar. 1 and the Miners will be in trouble in that one. They pulled a 64-62 decision over the T-Birds in Trinidad earlier but have not generally played nearly that well on the road. South and Central then meet in Pueblo the following week and the Colts will be burning for revenge. A sizzling Central team hung a 100-85 loss on the red-faced Colts several weeks back and probably will have to play nearly as well again if a repeat is to occur.

Should Wasson and South win those two games and the top clubs win the remainder of their contests with second division opponents, the race would end in a four-way tie. Playoff possibilities, if this should occur, are already being investigated.

Last week the Miners startled South by turning in an excellent job against the Colts' fast break. Junior Jim Toupal did the offensive damage, swishing thru the loose South defense for 27 points. Trinidad built a 10 point halftime lead and then held off a Colt threat in the final minutes to seal the victory.

Wasson got teriffic work from 6-4 Karl Tait who leapfrogged around the key to block shot after shot as the Thunderbirds tied up Palmer. Vic Shelton chipped in by cutting of Walt Hylton, the Terrors' leading scorer, without a point and altho the Tribe made a game battle of it for a half the manpower edge finally overwhelmed them in the late going. Tait also led the scoring with 16 points. Three Terrors, Bobby Williams, Dave Steward, and Alan Snyder, divided 24 of the team's 26 points with eight apiece.

Central used the early scoring and backboard work of Jethroe Pratt and late shot-making of C. D. Bodam to hold off Centennial in a contest in Pueblo. Bodam finished with 23 points and Pratt 19 as the Wildcats posted a 69-59 triumph.

Rich Hopkins returned to form after two dry weeks and led East past Grand Junction in a battle of tailenders Saturday. Hopkins, who led the SCL scorers for a while, had 23 points, his best output in some time.

Canadians Raise Funds to Send Skiers to Meet

OTTAWA (AP) — A group of Canadian federal surveyors have raised $173 to help two Indian skiers from the Yukon settlement of Old Crow go to Crested Butte, Colo., for the North American Ski Championships.

"We have raised the money to show our appreciation to the Indians of Old Crow who have helped us in the past during difficult survey operations in the Yukon," said Hugh Munro of the technical surveys department.

The two Indians, Mrs. Martha Benjamin and Ben Charlie, son of the chief of the tribe at Old Crow, competed in the U.S. National cross-country championships during the weekend at Franconia, N.H.

Frank Cooke of Ottawa, who is choosing the Canadian Olympic cross-country ski team for the Canadian Ski Association, would like them to compete at Crested Butte before taking part in the Canadian championships.

Cooke said a total of $600 will enable them to make the Colorado trip. "We're about $100 short," he said.

Jack Daniel still guides the making of his Tennessee sippin' whiskey

Old hands in the Hollow never forget the whiskey-making standards laid down by Mr. Jack himself. And we take care to recount them to new generations, step by step. Generally we start by telling how . . .

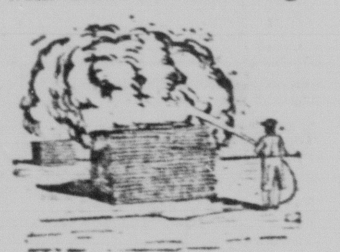
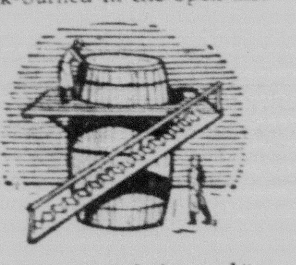
Here he cooked his neighbors' best grains in a mash, let it ferment around 90 hours, and distilled a fine sour-mash whiskey.

Then he gave it an "extra blessing" that made it different from other whiskies. He smoothed it out with Charcoal Mellowing.



That ancient Tennessee process calls for a hard maple tree from high ground. And it has to be rick-burned in the open air.



The special charcoal that results must be ground up fine and packed tightly in vats 10 feet deep. Next, the just-made whiskey is trickled in. What seeps out 10 days later is only the smooth sippin' part, ready for aging.

So you see, Mr. Jack still guides us, for we insist on making our whiskey—and Charcoal Mellowing it—just the way he always did. And after a sip of Jack Daniel's, we believe, you'll agree with our refusal to change.

Four PPL Cage Teams Battle for Loop Title

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Four Pikes Peak League cage teams are suiting up in their best armor preparing for a basketball showndown for the coveted conference crown Friday night.

Two-time PPL winner Salida leaves its home nest to tangle with unpredictable Fountain. The Spartans need a victory to stay in the keen loop race along with Widefield, Harrison, and Florence.

In other PPL encounters Friday, Widefield entertains lowly Leadville, Manitou Springs battles Academy High, Florence and Harrison slug it out for key position in league standings, and Cheyenne Mountain travels to Denver Christian for a non-leaguer.

Last Friday the Spartans knocked Academy High out of contention for the loop title via a 59-53 triumph to snap a two-game losing streak. In other PPL games Harrison nipped Manitou, 62-61, in an overtime contest; Florence eliminated highly regarded Cheyenne from a share of the league leadership, 63-47; and Leadville finally managed to record a league victory over Fountain, 50-49, in the last second of play. Widefield downed Pueblo Catholic, 52-49, in a non-conference game.

On Saturday, Salida whacked Canon Abbey, 90-60 in a non-league game.

The tall, talented Spartans proved too much for their smaller opponents as Don Schmidli's cagers dominated the backboards to outrebound the Kadets, 67 to 38. David Lantz topped his teammates in scoring with 15 points and yanked in 22 rebounds for the southern team. Flashy John Julius of Academy High continued his torrid scoring pace as the Kadet guard pumped in 21 points for a losing cause.

Julius is presently in second place for the individual scoring race next to Bill Raines of Cheyenne, who has 19.6 points scored per contest. Julius has a 17.5 mean, but the Kadets were awed by their taller opponents and could only tally 32 per cent of their field goal attempts.

The Spartans, on the other hand, enjoyed a successful scoring spree hitting better than 35 per cent as they connected 26 of 70 attempts. The Kadets made good 16 of 50 shots.

Altho John Delventhal's "Big Blue" rallied for 21 points in the final period, it was anti-climactic as the host team built up a comfortable lead thruout the first three periods.

With two seconds remaining in the first overtime period, Harrison overcame a 61-60 deficit to beat Manitou at the charity lane. The Mustangs committed a personal foul on Tom Elliott with two seconds left on the clock and the Panther made good his one-and-one try at the free throw lane to win the game for Harrison, 62-61. The Harrison triumph also eliminated Manitou from contention in the race for the PPL title.

Cheyenne, one of the potentially best cage teams in the conference, allowed a smaller team to knock them out of a choice spot in league standings as Florence simply outscored the Indians. Ken Weaver pumped in 28 points to lead the Huskie victory and established the highest individual scoring record this season.

Despite an outstanding effort by Cheyenne's Bill Raines, who tallied 21 points, and Joe Folk's 10 points, the Indians went under to the determined Florence quintet.

Widefield experienced little competition from their visiting guests from Pueblo Catholic as Tom Petersen's Gladiators won their non-league contest, 53-49. Rusty Wasinger paced the Widefield cagers with 14 points.

Francis Bendish, a young kegler from Bowl-Mor Lanes, has a tight grip in the singles event in the 42nd Annual Colorado Bowling Association City Tournament conducted at Ute Lanes.

Bendish raked in a 719 series (handicap) last Saturday to outpace the 684 bowlers participating in the single event slated to conclude Sunday night. Some 342 doubles are entered in the duo competition and 183 teams competing in the teams event.

In addition to establishing a lead in the singles, Bendish also leads the All-Event (handicap) with 1952 pins and the All-Event (scratch) with 1874.

ENT AFB LANES—Harry Eichelberger, one of Colorado Springs four "300" game bowlers, came close to establishing the first 700 scratch series at this house when he raked in a 693 series. Eichelberger registered his high series in the Intramural League Friday night and missed the 700 series in the last game in the ninth frame when he hung the 10-pin.

Ent manager Pete Peterson led the base team over Lowry AFB keglers out of Denver with an 827 scratch series (four games) while teammate Jim Pee put together four games for 808. The local team beat Lowry, 3751-3721, for a four game match.

Mary Fleming out paced the gals last week with a 582 scratch series in the Monday Night Mixed League.

JR. TRAVELING LEAGUE—Rick LaRue, who scored a whooping 672 scratch series at the Bowl-Mor two weeks ago with games of 221, 186, and 245 in the Junior League competition, led the youngsters active in the weekly bowling with 648 (handicap).

Rick also led in the high handicap single game with 258 on the Ent Alley Cats. Pat Osam was second high in series competition with 623 for Moose's Meeses while Jack Swanson of Circle Lanes Travelers hit for a 606. Jack copped the second highest game with 257 and Pat hit for a 234.

SCL Dead Heat Probable Altho Miners Keep Lead

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Anyone who thinks the South Central League isn't involved in a whacky winter of basketball—take a glance at these items.

1. Trinidad, a team that won exactly one basketball game during the entire South Central League campaign last winter, currently is pacing this year's race with a 10-2 mark and there are only three weeks to go.

2. The Miners remained in the top spot last week by closing out a perfect home season with a 63-57 defeat of Pueblo South, a team which had defeated them by 32 points three weeks earlier.

3. Wasson, a club which averaged 79 points per contest in its first two league starts and has an overall SCL average of 65, is suddenly plastering opponents all over the court—with defense.

4. A race, which had figured to produce nothing more than a few yawns before the season got underway, currently has a very good chance of ending up in a three or four way tie for the championship.

This, then, is the status as the state's southernmost AAA circuit heads into the final three weeks of its regular schedule, altho at the present rate playoffs may still be in progress after the state tournament is already over.

Trinidad has a week to sit back and survey the scramble after its important victory over South. The Miners got in an extra game early in the campaign against Grand Junction and thus draw a bye this weekend. It may be an uncomfortable rest, however, as the three challengers are all matched against second division opponents and if the form sheet prevails, Trinidad will be sharing its lead with Pueblo Central come next week with South and Wasson a scant game behind.

Central may have the roughest task of the three. The Wildcats travel to Colorado Springs to meet improved Palmer and if the Terrors can rebound from the disappointment of last Friday's pounding by Wasson, the 'Cats could get their whiskers twisted. Palmer can match Central in size and the Tribe has shown spurts of fairly good basketball recently.

South and Wasson should get by East and Centennial but neither Bill Brown of the Colts or Wasson's Dick Westbay are taking these contests lightly. East and South are regular rivals and Wasson has already suffered one loss and a narrow excape on the Pueblo floor this season.

Only two games matching contenders remain on the schedule and none come up this week. Trinidad goes to Wasson Mar. 1 and the Miners will be in trouble in that one. They pulled a 64-62 decision over the T-Birds in Trinidad earlier but have not generally played nearly that well on the road. South and Central then meet in Pueblo the following week and the Colts will be burning for revenge. A sizzling Central team hung a 100-85 loss on the red-faced Colts several weeks back and probably will have to play nearly as well again if a repeat is to occur.

Should Wasson and South win those two games and the top clubs win the remainder of their contests with second division opponents, the race would end in a four-way tie. Playoff possibilities, if this should occur, are already being investigated.

Last week the Miners startled South by turning in an excellent job against the Colts' fast break. Junior Jim Toupal did the offensive damage, swishing thru the loose South defense for 27 points. Trinidad built a 10 point halftime lead and then held off a Colt threat in the final minutes to seal the victory.

Wasson got teriffic work from 6-4 Karl Tait who leapfrogged around the key to block shot after shot as the Thunderbirds tied up Palmer. Vic Shelton chipped in by cutting of Walt Hylton, the Terrors' leading scorer, without a point and altho the Tribe made a game battle of it for a half the manpower edge finally overwhelmed them in the late going. Tait also led the scoring with 16 points. Three Terrors, Bobby Williams, Dave Steward, and Alan Snyder, divided 24 of the team's 26 points with eight apiece.

Central used the early scoring and backboard work of Jethroe Pratt and late shot-making of C. D. Bodam to hold off Centennial in a contest in Pueblo. Bodam finished with 23 points and Pratt 19 as the Wildcats posted a 69-59 triumph.

Rich Hopkins returned to form after two dry weeks and led East past Grand Junction in a battle of tailenders Saturday. Hopkins, who led the SCL scorers for a while, had 23 points, his best output in some time.

Canadians Raise Funds to Send Skiers to Meet

OTTAWA (AP) — A group of Canadian federal surveyors have raised $173 to help two Indian skiers from the Yukon settlement of Old Crow go to Crested Butte, Colo., for the North American Ski Championships.

"We have raised the money to show our appreciation to the Indians of Old Crow who have helped us in the past during difficult survey operations in the Yukon," said Hugh Munro of the technical surveys department.

The two Indians, Mrs. Martha Benjamin and Ben Charlie, son of the chief of the tribe at Old Crow, competed in the U.S. National cross-country championships during the weekend at Franconia, N.H.

Frank Cooke of Ottawa, who is choosing the Canadian Olympic cross-country ski team for the Canadian Ski Association, would like them to compete at Crested Butte before taking part in the Canadian championships.

Cooke said a total of $600 will enable them to make the Colorado trip. "We're about $100 short," he said.

Jack Daniel still guides the making of his Tennessee sippin' whiskey

Old hands in the Hollow never forget the whiskey-making standards laid down by Mr Jack himself. And we take care to recount them to new generations, step by step. Generally we start by telling how . . .

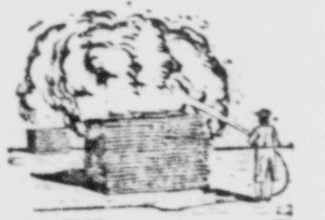
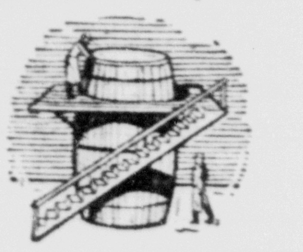
Here he cooked his neighbors' best grains in a mash, let it ferment around 90 hours, and distilled a fine sour-mash whiskey.

Then he gave it an "extra blessing" that made it different from other whiskies. He smoothed it out with Charcoal Mellowing.



That ancient Tennessee process calls for a hard maple tree from high ground. And it has to be rick-burned in the open air.



The special charcoal that results must be ground up fine and packed tightly in vats 10 feet deep. Next, the just-made whiskey is trickled in. What seeps out 10 days later is only the smooth sippin' part, ready for aging.

So you see, Mr. Jack still guides us, for we insist on making our whiskey—and Charcoal Mellowing it—just the way he always did. And after a sip of Jack Daniel's, we believe, you'll agree with our refusal to change.

. BEEF YIELD .

WASHINGTON (UPI)—If you're thinking of buying a beef carcass to package for the freezer or locker plant, here's a quick guide to yield.

Specialists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture say you can figure one-fourth of the carcass will yield steaks; another fourth, roasts; and a fourth, ground beef and stew meat. The final fourth: waste bounes and fat.

Administration Of U.S. Lands To Be Probed

By JOHN KAMPS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress will take a hard look this session at how Uncle Sam, the landlord, is administering his vast land holdings in the West.

Groundwork is being laid for committee investigations into operations of the Bureau of Land Management, which handles many millions of acres. BLM and the park and forest services together administer a sizable chunk of the nation's real estate, not all of it confined to the West.

Various groups in the rapidly growing population are competing for use of the dwindling land area for many purposes, including livestock grazing, mining, petroleum exploration, lumbering, recreation, hunting, fishing and many others.

The land base has dwindled in recent years because of withdrawals for military, reclamation, park and other restricted uses.

Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., announced last week the Senate Interior Public Lands subcommittee, which he heads, will conduct a sweeping investigation of BLM operations. His announcement came after word got out of a proposed increase in fees paid by ranchers for the grazing of livestock on government ranges.

The House Interior Public Land subcommittee also may investigate, its chairman, Rep. Walter S. Baring, D-Nev., said.

At hearings before Bible's committee last week, a half dozen members of Congress called for hearings in each of the western public land states.

One witness, Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, said "it is becoming increasingly evident that Congress must reassert its constitutional role over public lands if we in the West are to develop and grow."

Thirteen senators are cosponsoring a bill introduced by Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, to set up a board for hearing appeals from BLM decisions involving the use of federal lands. The bill also would permit appeals from the board to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, has introduced a bill designed to assure the best possible use of 500 million acres of land owned by the government.

The measure, aimed at permitting multiple-use of lands handled by BLM, is similar to a 1960 law covering national forests.

Agency and congressional officials will seek this year to work out legislation to revise the laws governing federal land use and administration policies.

The chairman of the House Interior Committee, Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., proposed revision last year. Commenting on proposed legislation to set up and preserve a wilderness system, Aspinall wrote President Kennedy:

". . . It is essential to establish clear-cut legislative guidelines, concerning the management, use and disposition of our public lands.

"This has come about because of past inaction of Congress, coupled with the growing scarcity of land in the United States, and the parallel need to preserve some of our undisturbed areas in their natural setting."

Aspinall asked the administration to come up with a bill "that would permit Congress to fulfill its constitutional responsibility to make rules governing the use and disposition of federal property and at the same time not hamper the effective administration of that property in accordance with the time-honored conservation principle of effecting the maximum good for the maximum number."

The President agreed that the land laws "warrant comprehensive revision." He replied:

"The immediate prospect of population pressures, which will tax land resources, demands policies aimed at current and future objectives, including the preservation of natural conditions for public enjoyment."

Kennedy said he had asked the secretaries of the interior and agriculture to make themselves and their staffs available to discuss proposed legislation with Aspinall and his committee aides.

. BEEF YIELD .

WASHINGTON (UPI)—If you're thinking of buying a beef carcass to package for the freezer or locker plant, here's a quick guide to yield.

Specialists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture say you can figure one-fourth of the carcass will yield steaks; another fourth, roasts; and a fourth, ground beef and stew meat. The final fourth: waste bounes and fat.

Administration Of U.S. Lands To Be Probed

By JOHN KAMPS

Groundwork is being laid for committee investigations into operations of the Bureau of Land Management, which handles many millions of acres. BLM and the park and forest services together administer a sizable chunk of the nation's real estate, not all of it confined to the West.

Various groups in the rapidly growing population are competing for use of the dwindling land area for many purposes, including livestock grazing, mining, petroleum exploration, lumbering, recreation, hunting, fishing and many others.

The land base has dwindled in recent years because of withdrawals for military, reclamation, park and other restricted uses.

Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., announced last week the Senate Interior Public Lands subcommittee, which he heads, will conduct a sweeping investigation of BLM operations. His announcement came after word got out of a proposed increase in fees paid by ranchers for the grazing of livestock on government ranges.

The House Interior Public Land subcommittee also may investigate, its chairman, Rep. Walter S. Baring, D-Nev., said.

One witness, Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, said "it is becoming increasingly evident that Congress must reassert its constitutional role over public lands if we in the West are to develop and grow."

Thirteen senators are cosponsoring a bill introduced by Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, to set up a board for hearing appeals from BLM decisions involving the use of federal lands. The bill also would permit appeals from the board to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, has introduced a bill designed to assure the best possible use of 500 million acres of land owned by the government.

The measure, aimed at permitting multiple-use of lands handled by BLM, is similar to a 1960 law covering national forests.

Agency and congressional officials will seek this year to work out legislation to revise the laws governing federal land use and administration policies.

The chairman of the House Interior Committee, Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., proposed revision last year. Commenting on proposed legislation to set up and preserve a wilderness system, Aspinall wrote President Kennedy:

". . . It is essential to establish clear-cut legislative guidelines, concerning the management, use and disposition of our public lands.

"This has come about because of past inaction of Congress, coupled with the growing scarcity of land in the United States, and the parallel need to preserve some of our undisturbed areas in their natural setting."

Aspinall asked the administration to come up with a bill "that would permit Congress to fulfill its constitutional responsibility to make rules governing the use and disposition of federal property and at the same time not hamper the effective administration of that property in accordance with the time-honored conservation principle of effecting the maximum good for the maximum number."

The President agreed that the land laws "warrant comprehensive revision." He replied:

"The immediate prospect of population pressures, which will tax land resources, demands policies aimed at current and future objectives, including the preservation of natural conditions for public enjoyment."

Kennedy said he had asked the secretaries of the interior and agriculture to make themselves and their staffs available to discuss proposed legislation with Aspinall and his committee aides.

Shirley MacLaine Is Presented Award

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Actress Shirley MacLaine is to receive the annual "Woman of the Year Award" Monday from Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770.

Officials of the undergraduate amateur theatrical club said Miss MacLaine was chosen for the award because "she has exhibited not only an extraordinarily high degree of acting ability but also a sparkling personality and a genuine lively sense of humor."

Airliner, 150 Aboard, Makes Safe Landing

MIAMI (UPI) — A Pan American World Airways Boeing 707 airliner, carrying 150 persons, landed safely Monday with a faulty nosewheel after circling for two and one-half hours to exhaust fuel.

The nosewheel of the big plane would not retract following take-off on a flight to Montego Bay, Jamaica, and it was ordered to return to Miami International Airport for repairs.

REPORT FROM MOTOR TREND EXPERTS ON THE '63 RAMBLERS:

"Lean, clean lines...more room inside"

ROOM FOR SIX 6-FOOTERS. "Interiors of the Rambler Classic and Ambassador are roomy and comfortable," said Motor Trend, "offer plenty of legroom . . . trunk is large . . . simple to load big things."

CURVED GLASS SIDE WINDOWS add to the fine-car look of these Ramblers, and make getting in and out astonishingly easy because they let door tops curve well into the roof.

The award reads, "for outstanding design achievement and engineering leadership in the 1963 Ramblers." The sleek new beauty of these great cars is self-evident. "Lean, clean lines". . . is the way the experts from Motor Trend Magazine said it. They made exhaustive tests on the '63 Ramblers, found "more room inside"—really went for Advanced Unit Construction ". . . so strong it'll take punishment longer, hold resale value." In ride and handling and performance and long-life features, they found the '63 Ramblers outstanding. See for yourself—at your Rambler dealer.

$83 Million Ohio State Deficit Reported Found

By ART PARKS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A team of public accountants say Ohio owes $83 million more than it has in the treasury. They add that Ohio has been spending at the rate of $52 million a year in excess of its income.

James A. Rhodes, Ohio's new Republican governor, has reacted to the financial bind by ordering an across-the-board cut to the point where spending equals income.

In office since Jan. 14, Rhodes has laid off about 5,000 of the estimated 60,000 state employes. He concedes the personnel slash may not yet be deep enough.

In fact, he has indicated strongly that thousands of additional state employes could lose their jobs under a reorganization bill being drafted in his office for legislative action.

"What we have in mind is reorganization for economy in state government," he said. Some reports circulated that as many as 19,000 state jobs would be stripped of civil service protection, but Rhodes termed the figure inaccurate and said there could be no estimate at this time.

While Rhodes and his finance director, Richard L. Krabach, scan the state's billion-dollar a year financial program for spots where more cuts can be made, there is resentment from those who have been fired.

There were questions raised by non-political persons who learned that some state employes were rehired after it was discovered their work was essential.

Most of those dismissed thus far were nearing the end of a 120-day probationary period—and some were Republicans.

Rhodes scored heavily in his election campaign with a plan for creating 200,000 new jobs. Now, with the firings already mounting into the thousands, there's been some comment that the governor will have to up that figure a bit.

This seems to perturb Rhodes not at all.

He spent the last 10 years as state auditor guarding the taxpayers' dollars. Before that he spent a dozen years as Columbus city auditor and mayor. He has a theory which he recited often in last year's gubernatorial campaign: "When you elect a governor, you elect management. What I am doing now in state government is exactly what you would do if you were running a business this size. It is just that simple."

DiSalle, four years ago, won enactment of a $155-million annual tax increase program. He found even that amount less than adequate, but two years ago a Republican legislature refused to levy further taxes.

DiSalle, former Toledo mayor and one-time price administrator under President Harry S. Truman, always said candidly that he was more interested in seeing that state wards got their monthly assistance checks than in seeing that distillers were paid for liquor sold to Ohio's state-operated liquor stores system.

As a result, about half of what Ohio owes now is for whisky already sold to the state stores.

Rhodes insists his wide-swinging payroll scythe has not interfered with state care in such sensitive areas as mental health.

Democrats are saying that the Rhodes new broom is only sweeping out Democrats to make room for Republicans. They term it a return to "jungle politics."

Rhodes, who is 53, says, "All I want to be—and I've ever wanted to be—is a good governor."

Castro Seen Burning Both Ends of Candle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro is burning both ends of the candle in the ideological split between Red China and the Soviet Union, according to a government expert.

"One might suggest that his heart is in Peking but his stomach is in Moscow," Edwin M. Martin, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told a House subcommittee Monday.

TRY AGAIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Noted Hollywood - Broadway producer-director Dore Schary apparently wasn't too devastated by the withdrawal of "Banderol," a play he wrote, while it was on its pre-Broadway tryout tour in Philadelphia last fall. He has prepared a new version of this story of movie studio politics and plans to head it toward Broadway again next fall.

$83 Million Ohio State Deficit Reported Found

By ART PARKS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A team of public accountants say Ohio owes $83 million more than it has in the treasury. They add that Ohio has been spending at the rate of $52 million a year in excess of its income.

James A. Rhodes, Ohio's new Republican governor, has reacted to the financial bind by ordering an across-the-board cut to the point where spending equals income.

In office since Jan. 14, Rhodes has laid off about 5,000 of the estimated 60,000 state employes. He concedes the personnel slash may not yet be deep enough.

In fact, he has indicated strongly that thousands of additional state employes could lose their jobs under a reorganization bill being drafted in his office for legislative action.

"What we have in mind is reorganization for economy in state government," he said. Some reports circulated that as many as 19,000 state jobs would be stripped of civil service protection, but Rhodes termed the figure inaccurate and said there could be no estimate at this time.

While Rhodes and his finance director, Richard L. Krabach, scan the state's billion-dollar a year financial program for spots where more cuts can be made, there is resentment from those who have been fired.

There were questions raised by non-political persons who learned that some state employes were rehired after it was discovered their work was essential.

Most of those dismissed thus far were nearing the end of a 120-day probationary period—and some were Republicans.

Rhodes scored heavily in his election campaign with a plan for creating 200,000 new jobs. Now, with the firings already mounting into the thousands, there's been some comment that the governor will have to up that figure a bit.

This seems to perturb Rhodes not at all.

He spent the last 10 years as state auditor guarding the taxpayers' dollars. Before that he spent a dozen years as Columbus city auditor and mayor. He has a theory which he recited often in last year's gubernatorial campaign: "When you elect a governor, you elect management. What I am doing now in state government is exactly what you would do if you were running a business this size. It is just that simple."

DiSalle, four years ago, won enactment of a $155-million annual tax increase program. He found even that amount less than adequate, but two years ago a Republican legislature refused to levy further taxes.

DiSalle, former Toledo mayor and one-time price administrator under President Harry S. Truman, always said candidly that he was more interested in seeing that state wards got their monthly assistance checks than in seeing that distillers were paid for liquor sold to Ohio's state-operated liquor stores system.

As a result, about half of what Ohio owes now is for whisky already sold to the state stores.

Rhodes insists his wide-swinging payroll scythe has not interfered with state care in such sensitive areas as mental health.

Democrats are saying that the Rhodes new broom is only sweeping out Democrats to make room for Republicans. They term it a return to "jungle politics."

Rhodes, who is 53, says, "All I want to be—and I've ever wanted to be—is a good governor."

Castro Seen Burning Both Ends of Candle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro is burning both ends of the candle in the ideological split between Red China and the Soviet Union, according to a government expert.

"One might suggest that his heart is in Peking but his stomach is in Moscow," Edwin M. Martin, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told a House subcommittee Monday.

TRY AGAIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Noted Hollywood - Broadway producer-director Dore Schary apparently wasn't too devastated by the withdrawal of "Banderol," a play he wrote, while it was on its pre-Broadway tryout tour in Philadelphia last fall. He has prepared a new version of this story of movie studio politics and plans to head it toward Broadway again next fall.

President Fails To Act on Civil Rights Promises

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Practical politicians must admire the agility with which President Kennedy has egg-walked around the civil rights promises in the 1960 Democratic platform. A prima ballerina performance.

Candidate Kennedy's civil rights promises in 1960 won for him a massive Negro vote without which he would have lost a few states and the presidential election. Now he ignores his civil rights platform promises and gets away with it. It is a fact that the Republicans goofed the Negro vote in 1960. That does not diminish the solid substance of Kennedy's performance.

The performance has not ended. Nor is it now any less spectacular and successful than in 1960. Consider:

The Kennedy administration has proposed no legislation to make good on the specific civil rights promises of the 1960 campaigns. More, when liberal Democrats prepared 1961 legislation to effect those promises, the newly elected President killed the project.

When Senate liberals moved last month to deal with the filibuster Kennedy refused to help. That killed that. And who is being angrily assailed now by Negro and left wing leaders as a filibuster-loving racist? Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson is the whipping boy. And do the Negroes and lefties condemn the President for refusing to help their campaign against the filibuster? They do not.

Kennedy held that the filibuster rule was a matter of Senate determination without White House pressure. Yet, Kennedy twisted arms last month to re-jigger the House Rules Committee toward a membership more favorable to the New Frontier. And now it is the Senate's turn for some arm twisting. Kennedy wanted to add some friendly Democrats to the Senate Finance Committee. They would prevent Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., from cutting the giblets out of the administration's planned-deficit approach to tax reduction and tax reform. Kennedy can risk ignoring his campaign promises on civil rights because he has other and effective ways of keeping Negro voters happy. He has no such alternative on taxes.

Kennedy evidently believes he must get favorable action on his tax pregram or come up to his 1964 re-election campaign against a politically deadly unemployment situation. There is no political alternative for Kennedy. He must deal with unemployment — get the country moving again — or risk losing in 1964.

Kennedy's political alternative to civil rights legislation goes like this: The Oxford, Miss., spectacular; prominent and well-paid government jobs for Negroes; and keeping before the public the idea that Kennedy will name a Negro to the cabinet. He probably will do it, too. Also:

A group of young Negro university women (Delta Sigma Theta) recently met here for lunch. Kennedy dropped in as a surprise guest. That news picture went all over the nation. The President and Mrs. Kennedy hosted a White House Lincoln's birthday party. The news picture showed nationally known Negroes as honor guests.

This kind of dynamic politics is more effective with Negro voters than civil rights legislation. There will be more, much more.

Care for Mentally Retarded Is Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The power of love as a nutrient in the growth of a child has stimulated some communities to organize programs in which volunteers learn to blend compassion in their care of mentally retarded children, reports "Children" journal of the U.S. Children's Bureau.

Such programs are credited with inspiring the president's panel on mental retardation to include in its recommendations the proposal that volunteer services for retarded children be part of the operations of a domestic peace corps.

Mushy Notes Are Okay, Judge Says

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Mrs. Elizabeth Menge told Judge Christ Seraphim that her husband of 40 years, Otto, 70, wrote her mushy notes and drank too much.

"Lady, you shouldn't be mad about the notes, you should be glad," the judge told Mrs. Menge. And turning to her husband he added, "You'd better stop drinking, but keep writing those notes to your wife."

Widefield High Windup

By SHARON LOVELESS

Color scheme for the dance, pink and white, was carried out in the decorations as well as the refreshments. Music was provided by the Versatiles.

Three new teachers have joined the staff of Widefield High School since the start of the semester. Mrs. Elizabeth Jernigan teaches art; Mrs. Betty Strother, English II and III, and Mrs. Irma Borgen, Latin I and II and English II.

Assistants to the editors of the Gladiator have been appointed. Assistant editor is Julie Allen. Assisting the society editor is Alice Stevens. Bob Byerly is the assistant sports editor. All are juniors since they are expected to assume these editorships next year.

Widefield's journalism - band room suffered damage during the recent high winds. One of the glass panels was shattered, requiring that all classes scheduled for that room be moved to the library.

National Honor Society has finished their plans for the initiation of new members due to take place this week. New members are elected by the teachers from a list of scholastically eligible students. Students become eligible for probationary membership when they are sophomores and for full membership when they are juniors.

On Feb. 28, students from Widefield and Palmer will take over the management of the Fashion Bar. Chosen as manager was Rusty Henninger, with Jim Heaton from Palmer as assistant manager.

At the last league student council meeting, attended by Art Barr and Carey Gomez from Widefield, revisions were made on the scoring sheets for the Sportsmanship Trophy. Widefield still retains its lead for the award.

Spotlighted seniors for the past issue of the Gladiator were Larry Brunken and Sharon Loveless. Larry is a member of the varsity basketball team and has lettered for two years. Sharon is sports editor of the gladiator and treasurer of the National Honor Society, of which she has been a member for three years. She is also a member of Girls' Club and Pep Club.

Widefield will receive an award-winning painting from the Security Art Association after the summer art contest. The association has decided that instead of keeping the prize-winning paintings; in future years, they will be given to schools in the Fountain Valley area.

Korean Woman Pilot Gets Plane From U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Members of the 99's — a club of female pilots — recently bought a $5,595 plane for a young Korean miss who needed it to help train other Korean women to fly. They bought it a sticky way.

The plane, traded for 3 million stamps, marked the first time trading stamps have paid for a plane. In the past, stamps have been used to purchase fire engines and school buses. And in Utica, N.Y., children now are collecting stamps to buy an elephant for the town zoo.

President Fails To Act on Civil Rights Promises

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Practical politicians must admire the agility with which President Kennedy has egg-walked around the civil rights promises in the 1960 Democratic platform. A prima ballerina performance.

Candidate Kennedy's civil rights promises in 1960 won for him a massive Negro vote without which he would have lost a few states and the presidential election. Now he ignores his civil rights platform promises and gets away with it. It is a fact that the Republicans goofed the Negro vote in 1960. That does not diminish the solid substance of Kennedy's performance.

The performance has not ended. Nor is it now any less spectacular and successful than in 1960. Consider:

The Kennedy administration has proposed no legislation to make good on the specific civil rights promises of the 1960 campaigns. More, when liberal Democrats prepared 1961 legislation to effect those promises, the newly elected President killed the project.

When Senate liberals moved last month to deal with the filibuster Kennedy refused to help. That killed that. And who is being angrily assailed now by Negro and left wing leaders as a filibuster-loving racist? Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson is the whipping boy. And do the Negroes and lefties condemn the President for refusing to help their campaign against the filibuster? They do not.

Kennedy held that the filibuster rule was a matter of Senate determination without White House pressure. Yet, Kennedy twisted arms last month to re-jigger the House Rules Committee toward a membership more favorable to the New Frontier. And now it is the Senate's turn for some arm twisting. Kennedy wanted to add some friendly Democrats to the Senate Finance Committee. They would prevent Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., from cutting the giblets out of the administration's planned-deficit approach to tax reduction and tax reform. Kennedy can risk ignoring his campaign promises on civil rights because he has other and effective ways of keeping Negro voters happy. He has no such alternative on taxes.

Kennedy evidently believes he must get favorable action on his tax program or come up to his 1964 re-election campaign against a politically deadly unemployment situation. There is no political alternative for Kennedy. He must deal with unemployment — get the country moving again — or risk losing in 1964.

Kennedy's political alternative to civil rights legislation goes like this: The Oxford, Miss., spectacular; prominent and well-paid government jobs for Negroes; and keeping before the public the idea that Kennedy will name a Negro to the cabinet. He probably will do it, too. Also:

A group of young Negro university women (Delta Sigma Theta) recently met here for lunch. Kennedy dropped in as a surprise guest. That news picture went all over the nation. The President and Mrs. Kennedy hosted a White House Lincoln's birthday party. The news picture showed nationally known Negroes as honor guests.

This kind of dynamic politics is more effective with Negro voters than civil rights legislation. There will be more, much more.

Care for Mentally Retarded Is Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The power of love as a nutrient in the growth of a child has stimulated some communities to organize programs in which volunteers learn to blend compassion in their care of mentally retarded children, reports "Children" journal of the U.S. Children's Bureau.

Such programs are credited with inspiring the president's panel on mental retardation to include in its recommendations the proposal that volunteer services for retarded children be part of the operations of a domestic peace corps.

Mushy Notes Are Okay, Judge Says

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Mrs. Elizabeth Menge told Judge Christ Seraphim that her husband of 40 years, Otto, 70, wrote her mushy notes and drank too much.

"Lady, you shouldn't be mad about the notes, you should be glad," the judge told Mrs. Menge. And turning to her husband he added, "You'd better stop drinking, but keep writing those notes to your wife."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Members of the 99's — a club of female pilots — recently bought a $5,595 plane for a young Korean miss who needed it to help train other Korean women to fly. They bought it a sticky way.

The plane, traded for 3 million stamps, marked the first time trading stamps have paid for a plane. In the past, stamps have been used to purchase fire engines and school buses. And in Utica, N.Y., children now are collecting stamps to buy an elephant for the town zoo.
